2,000,000 MEN MOVING TO BATTLE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug 13.—Although a battle, greater than any known in history has already opened in Belgium, continental censors were careful today to render impossible any clear view of the disposition of the 2,000,000 men engaged, or moving rapidly to the conflict.

The most important known phase of the fighting is still the engagement on the right flank of the first German army, where the Belgians and their allies are reported to have got in the rear of the Germans, turning their right wing.

About 12,000 men were engaged in this conflict, including infantry, cavalry and artillery. Although the German right is said to have been beaten back, there is no official confirmation of the early reports that Emperor William's forces were routed.

Following the receipt of dispatches from Brussels the official press bureau of the British government issued the following statement:

"An engagement has occurred northwest of Hassolet, (Belgium) between Belgian cavalry, supported by infantry and German forces presumed to be the second cavalry division, 2,000 strong, supported by one battalion of infantry and 12 guns.

"The Fourth German cavalry division is reported to be moving toward Jodigne, but no German infantry is known to be on the left

KAISER AT HEAD OF HIS FORCES IN THE FIELD.

Emperor William of Germany.

Although reports from Berlin indicate that the Kaiser has aroused great enthusiasm throughout the Empire by taking the field at the head of his troops, Paris dispatches tell another story. "Le Figaro," published in Paris, reports that two foreigners who arrived in Brussels from Berlin witnessed an agitation against the Emperor in the German capital. On Unter den Linden they say they heard cries of "Down with the Emperor," and "Down with the Crown Prince."

bank of the Meuse, except those above mentioned.

"A battalion of Germans are entrenching near Vise.

"The Belgian forts at Liege are still holding out.

"The Germans are planting batteries of heavy guns north of Liege preparatory to a siege of the forts. Heavy artillery fire is heard there.

"The Germans are constructing a temporary railway between Vise and Hamburg, parallel to the frontier of the province of Limburg, in the Netherlands. The Germans are throwing up entrenchments all the way to Liege."

These entrenchments are evidently those being built from the Dutch frontier westward along the Meuse. Continuing the statement says:

"Huy, Marche and Houffalize form the points on the western border frontier region held by German cavalry columns.

"German cavalry is moving eastward toward the Ourthe valley.

"The French retreat from Muelhausen in Alsace, was well carried out in face of the fact that the opposing forces is in the proportion of four Germans to every Frenchman.

"The German field artillery proved far inferior to that of the French and the shrapnel seemed only indifferently well aimed. The German artillery has not proved as effective as had been expected."

The above statement while indicating that the fighting near Hasslet was decisive did not give the reult.

Hasslet lies about 3 miles northwest of Liege. Jadoigne lies 30 miles southwest of Hasslet and 37 miles northwest of Liege.

The Exchange Telegraph Company today announced the receipt of a telegram from its Brussels correspondent saying that the right wing of the German army in Belgium was completely routed in battle with the Belgians. Nearly the whole German force was cut to pieces, the telegram said, the survivors being pursued by Belgian cavalry.

At the same time the Echange Telegraph Company stated that the following official announcement had been issued by the Belgian war office in Brussels:

"After passing the night in the position they had taken up following Tuesday's retreat, the Germans were reported in considerable numbers to be massing opposite one of our positions which they believed to be weak. The Belgian general staff was made fully aware of this movement by Belgian cavalrymen who had made a reconnaissance of the enemy's position.

"Twelve thousand men took part in a pitched battle which is regarded as the commencement of the greatest engagement which is yet to come, and our troops proved once again that they are possessed of all the attributes necessary for good soldiers. They had by far the best of matters. The main positions of the armies, to all appearances, remain unchanged, notwithstanding this battle. One can well believe that the success of our arms has been of great advantage to the allies in thus giving them time to make plans for a concentrated advance."

It was pointed out as significant that the Belgian war office failed to say that the Germans were routed or partly cut to pieces. The fight referred to in the Belgian war office statement was unquestionably the conflict at Hasslet.

These announcements show that the Germans had made rapid progress through the hostile country, having reached the very heart of the interior.

National interest in the British isles was centered upon the conflict in Belgium, where British soldiers are engaged, although hostilities are in progress for about 250 miles, all along the eastern border of France, where the French forces are said to be holding their own.

The encounter near Hasslet shows that the advanced troops of the German army in Belgium had penetrated to a point within 55 miles of Antwerp, which German strategists may have for their objective. The capture of Antwerp would give the Germans a port on the North Sea much nearer to the English channel than any of the German coast.

The fighting at Hasslet is only a small part of the general conflict which is promised on a great battlefield taking in more than 300 square miles in Central Belgium.

This extends from Louvain, where the headquarters of the Belgian army are located, eastward to a point nearly touching the Dutch frontier, thence southward to a point south of Verviers, thence westward to Namur at the juncture of the Chambre and Meuse rivers. In the center of this quadrangle is Liege with its ring of forts where the German artillery is pounding away by night and by day in an attempt to demolish the Belgian works.

The strongest section of the great German army in Belgium and Luxemburg is the center and left flank, which contain approximately 400,000 men with artillery (according to the military expert of the London Times), and which is reported to be advancing slowly but steadily westward.

British military men believe that it will be three or four days and maybe longer, before the terrific engagement with its boundless hosts of armed men, terminates in victory for one side or the other. Most military men agree, however, that it may prove one of the bloodiest battles in the world's history.

Dispatches gathered from various sources evince the apparent falsity of earlier advices from Brussels to the effect that Belgian troops and their allies had driven all the German soldiers out of Belgian territory lying south of the Meuse. In all probability this country lies in the direct path of the invasion of France.

There is apparent ground for belief that a big naval engagement is imminent. Colonel Repington, the London Times military expert, says:

"We are on the eve of a great struggle on the Meuse. Surrounded as she is by powerful enemies, a great victory is necessary for Germany at this moment. Will she strike by sea when she strikes by land That is the only blow open to Germany which can do us mortal hurt if it succeeds. The chances are against success, and with every day of the war the last chances become less, because our land forces are daily growing in numbers and solidity. We must regard the problem through German eyes, and however much we may disbelieve in the German solution, we must be prepared for a stroke which would accord with the German soldiers' theory of war."

A telegram from Amsterdam says that Germans are throwing up barricades along the Meuse between Maesstricht and Liege, evidently to prevent the allies from getting in the German rear and cutting off communication and supplies. They have impressed a number of Belgian peasants in the work, the telegram said.

Another telegram from the same source said that the sound of heavy artillery fire could be heard from the direction of Liege or Tongres.

Brazil Speaks Up.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Aug. 13.—Brazil has demanded an explanation from Germany, according to an announcement made here today of an attack alleged to have been made on Bernardino de Campos, former president of the state of Sao Paulo. The French consul at Stuttgart reported on his arrival here that Senor de Campos, who is blind, was assaulted and robbed.

DAY'S WAR NEWS AT A GLANCE

Greatest battle in world's history believed to have opened in Belgium. 2,000,000 French, German and Belgian troops drawing close for death grapple. Belgian war office claims victory in two opening engagements, at Haelen and Eghezee, which are about 25 miles apart.

Fighting at Haelen lasted all day Tuesday, the Germans leaving their dead and dying on the field as they withdrew. Belgians aided at Eghezee by machine guns mounted on automobiles.

The news of the fighting has come only from Belgian and English sources. This may explain the reports that the Germans are being worsted. If German versions could be secured they might tell a much different story.

One English correspondent reports that the Germans were routed. No advices have confirmed this statement.

The Brussels war office admits the Belgian cavalry lost heavily in fighting about Tirlemont. Liege forts still holding out.

GERMANS CLAIM VICTORY IN ALSACE

Wireless Dispatch Received at Tuckerton Direct From Berlin States That French Have Been Driven From German Soil.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Tuckerton, N. J., Aug 13.—A wireless dispatch received direct from Germany today states that the Berlin government claims to have won victories over the French troops at Muelhausen and Longwy.

It states that at Muelhausen the Germans captured 120 French officers, 1,110 soldiers and four cannon while at Longwy one thousand French officers and soldiers were captured. The message states further that all French troops have been driven off German soil.

The dispatch came from Berlin and was wirelessed from the powerful German station at Nauon to the station of the Goldschmidt Wireless Company here.

These two stations are among the most powerful in the world and are able to communicate without a relay.

The news conveyed in the dispatch indicates that the early suspicions that reports from London and Paris were colored to favor the allies were fully justified. It is possible, however, that Germany is also making claims of victories to hide its losses.

GERMANS PUSHING TOWARD BRUSSELS

By Telegraph to The Freeman

London, Aug. 13.—A Central News Agency dispatch received from Brussels late this afternoon says that despite the reverses which the Belgians claim to have inflicted upon the Germans northwst of Liege, the latter have rallied and pushed forward the main force of their right flank to Louvain.

Louvain has been occupied by the Belgian officers as headquarters and the base of infantry operations.

The dispatch says that fighting is going on between infantry, cavalry and artillery at Louvain, Hasselt, Diest and Haelen.

These dispatches indicate that the Germans are trying to push onward toward Brussels by sweeping the Belgians and their allies before them.

Part of the battlefield over which today's conflict raged was the scene of the struggle of Tuesday and Wednesday. The fields still hold unburied corpses which fell during the early stages of the battle. The field is littered with all the carnage of a modern battle. The roads have been plowed by shrapnel.

The Germans are depending mainly upon their cavalry forces, supported by field artillery.

It is reported from Brussels that a section of the populace there is panic stricken, fearing that the Germans will march upon the Belgian capital.

The churches of Brussels are crowded throughout the day and night. Refugees from the battle zones who crowded into the city have taken refuge there and mingle with worshippers who enter to pray for the success of the Belgian forces. Dispatch bearers from the front prostrate themselves before the altar before returning to the scene of battle.

The New Park.

The city engineer and street department are in charge of the work of laying out the park on the lower end of the city hall instead of Bungevin's Sons as was stated. The street force has men at work grading the grounds preparatory to having the same seeded and garden spots planted.

2,000,000 MEN MOVING TO BATTLE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug 13.—Although a battle, greater than any known in history has already opened in Belgium, continental censors were careful today to render impossible any clear view of the disposition of the 2,000,000 men engaged, or moving rapidly to the conflict.

The most important known phase of the fighting is still the engagement on the right flank of the first German army, where the Belgians and their allies are reported to have got in the rear of the Germans, turning their right wing.

About 12,000 men were engaged in this conflict, including infantry, cavalry and artillery. Although the German right is said to have been beaten back, there is no official confirmation of the early reports that Emperor William's forces were routed.

Following the receipt of dispatches from Brussels the official press bureau of the British government issued the following statement:

"An engagement has occurred northwest of Hassolet, (Belgium) between Belgian cavalry, supported by infantry and German forces presumed to be the second cavalry division, 2,000 strong, supported by one battalion of infantry and 12 guns.

"The Fourth German cavalry division is reported to be moving toward Jodigne, but no German infantry is known to be on the left

KAISER AT HEAD OF HIS FORCES IN THE FIELD.

Emperor William of Germany.

Although reports from Berlin indicate that the Kaiser has aroused great enthusiasm throughout the Empire by taking the field at the head of his troops, Paris dispatches tell another story. "Le Figaro," published in Paris, reports that two foreigners who arrived in Brussels from Berlin witnessed an agitation against the Emperor in the German capital. On Unter den Linden they say they heard cries of "Down with the Emperor," and "Down with the Crown Prince."

bank of the Meuse, except those above mentioned.

"A battalion of Germans are entrenching near Vise.

"The Belgian forts at Liege are still holding out.

"The Germans are planting batteries of heavy guns north of Liege preparatory to a siege of the forts. Heavy artillery fire is heard there.

"The Germans are constructing a temporary railway between Vise and Hamburg, parallel to the frontier of the province of Limburg, in the Netherlands. The Germans are throwing up entrenchments all the way to Liege."

These entrenchments are evidently those being built from the Dutch frontier westward along the Meuse. Continuing the statement says:

"Huy, Marche and Houffalize form the points on the western border frontier region held by German cavalry columns.

"German cavalry is moving eastward toward the Ourthe valley.

"The French retreat from Muelhausen in Alsace, was well carried out in face of the fact that the opposing forces is in the proportion of four Germans to every Frenchman.

"The German field artillery proved far inferior to that of the French and the shrapnel seemed only indifferently well aimed. The German artillery has not proved as effective as had been expected."

The above statement while indicating that the fighting near Hasslet was decisive did not give the result.

Hasslet lies about 3 miles northwest of Liege. Jadoigne lies 30 miles southwest of Hasslet and 37 miles northwest of Liege.

The Exchange Telegraph Company today announced the receipt of a telegram from its Brussels correspondent saying that the right wing of the German army in Belgium was completely routed in battle with the Belgians. Nearly the whole German force was cut to pieces, the telegram said, the survivors being pursued by Belgian cavalry.

At the same time the Echange Telegraph Company stated that the following official announcement had been issued by the Belgian war office in Brussels:

"After passing the night in the position they had taken up following Tuesday's retreat, the Germans were reported in considerable numbers to be massing opposite one of our positions which they believed to be weak. The Belgian general staff was made fully aware of this movement by Belgian cavalrymen who had made a reconnaissance of the enemy's position.

"Twelve thousand men took part in a pitched battle which is regarded as the commencement of the greatest engagement which is yet to come, and our troops proved once again that they are possessed of all the attributes necessary for good soldiers. They had by far the best of matters. The main positions of the armies, to all appearances, remain unchanged, notwithstanding this battle. One can well believe that the success of our arms has been of great advantage to the allies in thus giving them time to make plans for a concentrated advance."

It was pointed out as significant that the Belgian war office failed to say that the Germans were routed or partly cut to pieces. The fight referred to in the Belgian war office statement was unquestionably the conflict at Hasslet.

These announcements show that the Germans had made rapid progress through the hostile country, having reached the very heart of the interior.

National interest in the British isles was centered upon the conflict in Belgium, where British soldiers are engaged, although hostilities are in progress for about 250 miles, all along the eastern border of France, where the French forces are said to be holding their own.

The encounter near Hasslet shows that the advanced troops of the German army in Belgium had penetrated to a point within 55 miles of Antwerp, which German strategists may have for their objective. The capture of Antwerp would give the Germans a port on the North Sea much nearer to the English channel than any of the German coast.

The fighting at Hasslet is only a small part of the general conflict which is promised on a great battlefield taking in more than 300 square miles in Central Belgium.

This extends from Louvain, where the headquarters of the Belgian army are located, eastward to a point nearly touching the Dutch frontier, thence southward to a point south of Verviers, thence westward to Namur at the juncture of the Chambre and Meuse rivers. In the center of this quadrangle is Liege with its ring of forts where the German artillery is pounding away by night and by day in an attempt to demolish the Belgian works.

The strongest section of the great German army in Belgium and Luxemburg is the center and left flank, which contain approximately 400,000 men with artillery (according to the military expert of the London Times), and which is reported to be advancing slowly but steadily westward.

British military men believe that it will be three or four days and maybe longer, before the terrific engagement with its boundless hosts of armed men, terminates in victory for one side or the other. Most military men agree, however, that it may prove one of the bloodiest battles in the world's history.

Dispatches gathered from various sources evince the apparent falsity of earlier advices from Brussels to the effect that Belgian troops and their allies had driven all the German soldiers out of Belgian territory lying south of the Meuse. In all probability this country lies in the direct path of the invasion of France.

There is apparent ground for belief that a big naval engagement is imminent. Colonel Repington, the London Times military expert, says:

"We are on the eve of a great struggle on the Meuse. Surrounded as she is by powerful enemies, a great victory is necessary for Germany at this moment. Will she strike by sea when she strikes by land That is the only blow open to Germany which can do us mortal hurt if it succeeds. The chances are against success, and with every day of the war the last chances become less, because our land forces are daily growing in numbers and solidity. We must regard the problem through German eyes, and however much we may disbelieve in the German solution, we must be prepared for a stroke which would accord with the German soldiers' theory of war."

A telegram from Amsterdam says that Germans are throwing up barricades along the Meuse between Maesstricht and Liege, evidently to prevent the allies from getting in the German rear and cutting off communication and supplies. They have impressed a number of Belgian peasants in the work, the telegram said.

Another telegram from the same source said that the sound of heavy artillery fire could be heard from the direction of Liege or Tongres.

Brazil Speaks Up.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Aug. 13.—Brazil has demanded an explanation from Germany, according to an announcement made here today of an attack alleged to have been made on Bernardino de Campos, former president of the state of Sao Paulo. The French consul at Stuttgart reported on his arrival here that Senor de Campos, who is blind, was assaulted and robbed.

DAY'S WAR NEWS AT A GLANCE

Greatest battle in world's history believed to have opened in Belgium. 2,000,000 French, German and Belgian troops drawing close for death grapple. Belgian war office claims victory in two opening engagements, at Haelen and Eghezee, which are about 25 miles apart.

Fighting at Haelen lasted all day Tuesday, the Germans leaving their dead and dying on the field as they withdrew. Belgians aided at Eghezee by machine guns mounted on automobiles.

The news of the fighting has come only from Belgian and English sources. This may explain the reports that the Germans are being worsted. If German versions could be secured they might tell a much different story.

One English correspondent reports that the Germans were routed. No advices have confirmed this statement.

GERMANS CLAIM VICTORY IN ALSACE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Tuckerton, N. J., Aug 13.—A wireless dispatch received direct from Germany today states that the Berlin government claims to have won victories over the French troops at Muelhausen and Longwy.

It states that at Muelhausen the Germans captured 120 French officers, 1,110 soldiers and four cannon while at Longwy one thousand French officers and soldiers were captured. The message states further that all French troops have been driven off German soil.

The dispatch came from Berlin and was wirelessed from the powerful German station at Nauon to the station of the Goldschmidt Wireless Company here.

These two stations are among the most powerful in the world and are able to communicate without a relay.

The news conveyed in the dispatch indicates that the early suspicions that reports from London and Paris were colored to favor the allies were fully justified. It is possible, however, that Germany is also making claims of victories to hide its losses.

GERMANS PUSHING TOWARD BRUSSELS

By Telegraph to The Freeman

London, Aug. 13.—A Central News Agency dispatch received from Brussels late this afternoon says that despite the reverses which the Belgians claim to have inflicted upon the Germans northwst of Liege, the latter have rallied and pushed forward the main force of their right flank to Louvain.

Louvain has been occupied by the Belgian officers as headquarters and the base of infantry operations.

The dispatch says that fighting is going on between infantry, cavalry and artillery at Louvain, Hasselt, Diest and Haelen.

These dispatches indicate that the Germans are trying to push onward toward Brussels by sweeping the Belgians and their allies before them.

Part of the battlefield over which today's conflict raged was the scene of the struggle of Tuesday and Wednesday. The fields still hold unburied corpses which fell during the early stages of the battle. The field is littered with all the carnage of a modern battle. The roads have been plowed by shrapnel.

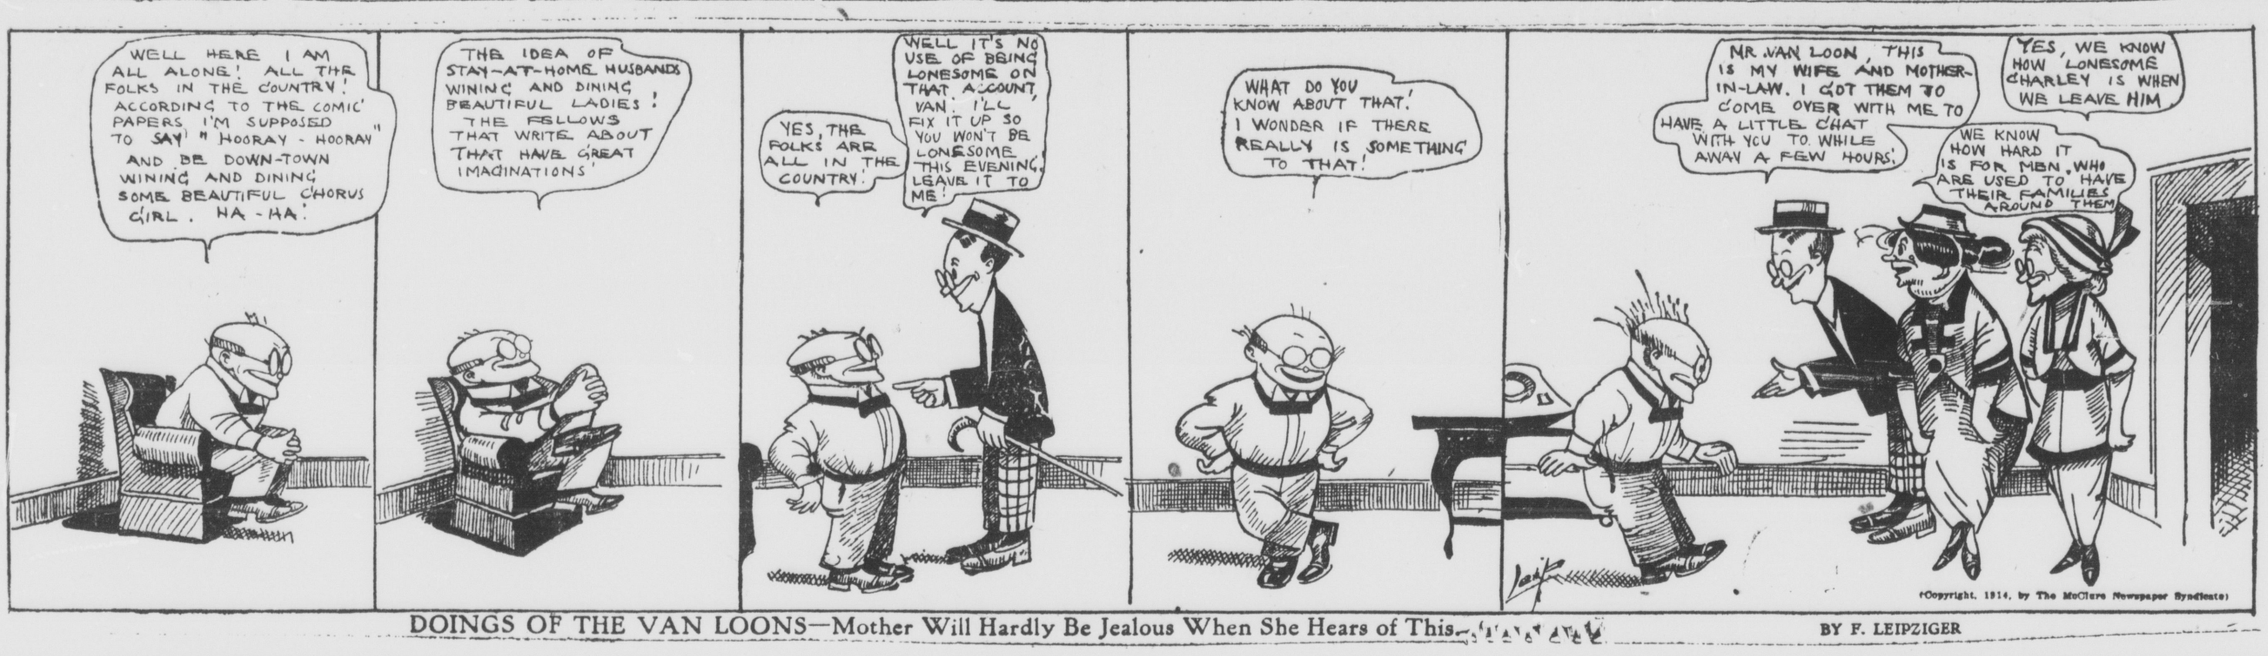

The Germans are depending mainly upon their cavalry forces, supported by field artillery.

It is reported from Brussels that a section of the populace there is panic stricken, fearing that the Germans will march upon the Belgian capital.

The churches of Brussels are crowded throughout the day and night. Refugees from the battle zones who crowded into the city have taken refuge there and mingle with worshippers who enter to pray for the success of the Belgian forces. Dispatch bearers from the front prostrate themselves before the altar before returning to the scene of battle.

The New Park.

The city engineer and street department are in charge of the work of laying out the park on the lower end of the city hall instead of Bungevin's Sons as was stated. The street force has men at work grading the grounds preparatory to having the same seeded and garden spots planted.

As here shown, blue gingham, was used with blue and white striped percale for trimming. The closing is effected in front with eyelet lacing, but may be finished at the centre back, if preferred. The bloomers may be of the same material as the dress, or of sateen, galatea, or cambric. The design is good for all wash fabrics, and for serge. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. It requires 3¼ yards of 44 inch material for a 4 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state size wanted.

Antlers of Slow Growth.

When a stag loses its horns it retires to the dense woods, away from its kind, and remains secluded until it is again armed. The growth of the new pair of antlers is very remarkable. The young buck does not attain the fully-branched pair until late in life. The first set may have only a few branches, but the next year another point or more is gained, and so on, until, in several years, the animal may have—as in the case of a red stag caught in England—a pair of antlers with 66 points.

CALLING A HALT!

THERE should be personal restraint over every act of our lives. Whether it be in the act of eating, drinking, of work or of play, there should be a guiding sense of "so far and no farther." Ninety-five per cent of stomach and catarrhal troubles result solely from over-eating, and yet the old guess of blaming the weather still prevails. Is it sacrificial to stop that which leads to certain misery and shortens one's days?

When people realize that they alone are responsible for their ills, they will then revise their platforms. Those who use our

LATTINGTOWN.

Lattingtown, Aug. 13.—It is getting quite dry in this section; wells are getting lower and small streams are drying up.

All small fruits are picked and the fruit growers are now gathering apples and pears of the early sort. Apples are smaller this year owing to the weather. Pears are a fair crop and peaches none as to crop.

Currants are and have been very low. They haven't been so low since the presidential term of Cleveland. Some may lay it to the present administration for the low price of currants, but there was a large crop and it takes sugar for such fruit. Quite a number of large fruit growers did not pick all of their currants in this neighborhood.

Politics in the Empire state this coming fall is rather mixed and it is hard to tell which party will be the victor. It is similar to the great war now raging on land and sea in Europe, but not so bad as no blood will be shed either by Colonel Roosevelt or Tammany Murphy.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

9980.—A Comfortable Play or School Dress. Girls' Dress With or Without Bloomers, and With Long or Short Sleeve.

As here shown, blue gingham, was used with blue and white striped percale for trimming. The closing is effected in front with eyelet lacing, but may be finished at the centre back, if preferred. The bloomers may be of the same material as the dress, or of sateen, galatea, or cambric. The design is good for all wash fabrics, and for serge. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. It requires 3¼ yards of 44 inch material for a 4 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state size wanted.

Antlers of Slow Growth.

When a stag loses its horns it retires to the dense woods, away from its kind, and remains secluded until it is again armed. The growth of the new pair of antlers is very remarkable. The young buck does not attain the fully-branched pair until late in life. The first set may have only a few branches, but the next year another point or more is gained, and so on, until, in several years, the animal may have—as in the case of a red stag caught in England—a pair of antlers with 66 points.

GERMAN ARTILLERY VERY EFFICIENT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Aug. 13.—Several French towns in the department of Meurthet-Moselle, on the German frontier, have been shelled by the German artillery.

The German invaders have pushed heavy artillery over the border and French guns are being rushed to resist them.

The French government is today pouring re-inforcements through the defiles of the Vosges mountains to join the French forces in Alsace.

In an official statement the French war office says:

"The engagements which have taken place show that our artillery has a marked advantage over the German artillery.

"In all engagements the Germans have resorted to barbarous methods, shooting hostages without reason.

"Our strategical situation remains, as before, excellent.

"We are placing in Upper Alsace a considerable number of troops."

The French town of Pont-a-Mousson, on the Moselle river, about five miles inland from the Alsatian border, has been partly destroyed by German artillery attached to the army of the Moselle. The cannonade was begun at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, the Germans using cannon of heavy calibre.

Although the German artillery was located considerable distance away, the gunners showed precise accuracy and shells dropped in the streets in all parts of the town. Many of the inhabitants were killed and wounded and buildings were wrecked. Early in the bombardment many of the inhabitants of the place fled for their lives.

Troops are massed in force around Nomeny and Chambrey, respectively 15 and 28 miles south of Metz and, if not already shelled, the towns are in danger of destruction from a bombardment.

Heavy firing, evidently of artillery, has been reported from Baccarat, thirty miles southeast of Nancy, on French soil.

French forces have seized the mountain passes of Bonhomme and St. Marie and have planted artillery on the heights commanding Saint Marie Aux Maines.

Although the war office refuses to give any extended account of the movements of the French troops along the Alsatian front the meager announcements from that official source strongly indicate that the French troops are being pushed forward, supported by artillery.

The attempt of the Germans to stem the French advance by flooding the Valley of the Scille, is said to have been unsuccessful. The belief prevails that the French army of invasion in Alsace is being pushed slowly toward Metz. The Germans have prepared formidable fortifications, especially in the neighborhood of the forest of Hardt, which is a belt of woodland in the southern part of Lorraine.

The big military prison at Rheims is being filled up with German prisoners. French solders have captured many scattered German cavalry patrols near Dinant and Rochefort since the outbreak of hostilities and practically all of these captives have been interned at Rheims. Most of them are Uhlans.

The government is transporting vast quantities of ammunition to all points along the eastern frontier on trains requisitioned for that purpose.

To encourage commerce during the war the French government, it is announced, will cover war risks on importations and exportations by sea. Vessels under the French flag will be covered to 80 per cent of their value while the total value of cargoes under the French flag or the flag of French allies or neutral states will be covered in consideration of a premium.

400 AMERICANS LEAVE GERMANY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rotterdam, Aug. 13.—Four hundred American refugees arrived here today on a special train from Berlin. They were accompanied by James W. Gerard, American ambassador to Germany.

The refugees will sail for the United States on a Dutch liner as soon as arrangements can be completed and Mr. Gerard will return to Berlin.

Berlin, (via Copenhagen and London), Aug. 13.—The German government today ordered that effective steps be taken to facilitate the departure of Americans from the country. With mobilization practically complete many railroad trains have been released from military service and these will be devoted to helping foreigners who wish to leave.

A special train carrying 400 Americans left for Holland this morning and preparations for the departure of other citizens are being pushed.

Cash is now being paid on letters of credit by the large banks and this is serving to relieve the fears of the Americans who were stranded here.

Outing at High Falls.

On invitation of Mr. Terwilliger, Mrs. McMillan, social worker for the Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Oughletree, county agent for dependent and defective children, took a party of boys to High Falls for a day's outing on Wednesday. A fine time was had by all.

Breakdown Caused by Coffee

"I am satisfied," says a probminent physician, "that coffee is responsible in a great degree for the premature breakdown of our active men and women.

"They suffer from caffeine poisoning.

"Of the truth of this, there is not the shadow of a doubt. Our common sense tells us that the daily swallowing of caffeine" (the alkaloid in tea and coffee), "powerfully affecting heart and brain—is followed by nervous depression, and finally by more or less disastrous results.

"I believe if people in general would use a harmless, nutritious drink like Postum as a beverage in place of tea and coffee, their physical and mental condition would be much improved."

Thousands, troubled with nervousness, biliousness, sleeplessness, headache and heart flutter, have done precisely what this physician advises—given up tea and coffee and adopted—

with happy results.

"There's a Reason"

Postum is a pure food-drink, made from wheat and a bit of molasses, containing the nutrition of the grain. No caffeine—no drugs—no harmful ingredient in Postum. A delicious, nourishing beverage.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum—must be boiled, 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—soluble—made in the cup, instantly, 30c and 50c tins.

Grocers everywhere sell both kinds and the cost per cup is about the same.

HEAVY GERMAN LOSSES REPORTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug. 13.—A Basel dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that, according to latest estimates, the Germans lost between 8,000 and 10,000 men in the fighting at Muelhausen.

The Swiss correspondent reports that the hospital facilities at Muelhausen proved inadequate to care for the wounded and that schools, hotels and churches had to be utilized, all being filled.

Finding it impossible to take care of all those suffering from wounds the civic authorities secured permission from the German and French troops to send special trains with hundreds of patients to Muelhausen and other towns.

BERMUDA GETS A MIDNIGHT SCARE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 13.—Three hundred passengers from Bermuda arrived here today on the Royal Mail packet Carribean and related stories of war-like preparations that have been going in Hamilton, Bermuda.

The passengers, mostly women, declared that practically every able bodied man on the island including Americans, was compelled to assist in digging trenches overlooking the hills. More than a score of German freight steamers, captured by the British cruisers, have been brought into the Hamilton port.

A French cruiser went into the Hamilton harbor a few nights ago, arriving after midnight and fired a salute. The natives thought it was the Germans bombarding the town

BELGIANS ADMIT HEAVY LOSSES

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Brussels, Aug. 13.—The war office admitted today that the Belgian cavalry had suffered heavy losses in the fighting at Tirlemont, but declared that the allied Franco-Belgian infantry had checked the advance of the German forces. It is reported that heavy fighting is going on today and that the Germans have brought their artillery into play with deadly effect on the advance forces of the allies.

The Belgian Lancers, the finest cavalry of the kingdom, bore the brunt of the opening engagement at Tirlemont and fought with great valor, charging the Germans in the face of a heavy fire from machine guns. Describing one charge made by a small force of Lancers against 2,000 Uhlans the war office states that the Belgians killed 250 of the enemy, but they themselves lost only 25 men. Among the Belgians killed were Captain Knappen and Lieut. Count Van Der Burch.

Concluding its statement the war office said:

"The Lancers were checked by the machine guns but the Belgian infantry stopped the Germans."

Another official announcement read as follows:

"Belgian and French troops have effected a junction south of Brussels. The German advance in the Belgian provinces of Limburg and Brabant has been checked. The Germans are bringing up heavy artillery against Liege."

The government has restored communication with Liege by a roundabout route and today it was stated that not only were the besieged forts still holding out, but the Belgian troops to the west of the city had resumed the offensive and after a sharp struggle driven the Germans back, recapturing ground that had been lost.

One detachment of the Belgian cavalry, working around to the rear of the Germans, blew up a number of bridges and cut the enemy off from supplies. One report says that the German cavalry to the southwest of Liege was compelled to fall back.

The siege guns that have been brought to bear on Liege are the most powerful in the ordnance of the German army. They include six inch long guns, six inch howitzers and four inch mortars. As the Liege forts are equipped with massive guns, the greatest artillery duel of history is probably in progress today.

GERMAN ARTILLERY VERY EFFICIENT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Aug. 13.—Several French towns in the department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, on the German frontier, have been shelled by the German artillery.

The German invaders have pushed heavy artillery over the border and French guns are being rushed to resist them.

The French government is today pouring re-inforcements through the defiles of the Vosges mountains to join the French forces in Alsace.

In an official statement the French war office says:

"The engagements which have taken place show that our artillery has a marked advantage over the German artillery.

"In all engagements the Germans have resorted to barbarous methods, shooting hostages without reason.

"Our strategical situation remains, as before, excellent.

"We are placing in Upper Alsace a considerable number of troops."

The French town of Pont-a-Mousson, on the Moselle river, about five miles inland from the Alsatian border, has been partly destroyed by German artillery attached to the army of the Moselle. The cannonade was begun at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, the Germans using cannon of heavy calibre.

Although the German artillery was located considerable distance away, the gunners showed precise accuracy and shells dropped in the streets in all parts of the town. Many of the inhabitants were killed and wounded and buildings were wrecked. Early in the bombardment many of the inhabitants of the place fled for their lives.

Troops are massed in force around Nomeny and Chambrey, respectively 15 and 28 miles south of Metz and, if not already shelled, the towns are in danger of destruction from a bombardment.

Heavy firing, evidently of artillery, has been reported from Baccarat, thirty miles southeast of Nancy, on French soil.

French forces have seized the mountain passes of Bonhomme and St. Marie and have planted artillery on the heights commanding Saint Marie Aux Mines.

Although the war office refuses to give any extended account of the movements of the French troops along the Alsatian front the meager announcements from that official source strongly indicate that the French troops are being pushed forward, supported by artillery.

The attempt of the Germans to stem the French advance by flooding the Valley of the Seille, is said to have been unsuccessful. The belief prevails that the French army of invasion in Alsace is being pushed slowly toward Metz. The Germans have prepared formidable fortifications, especially in the neighborhood of the forest of Hardt, which is a belt of woodland in the southern part of Lorraine.

The big military prison at Rheims is being filled up with German prisoners. French soldiers have captured many scattered German cavalry patrols near Dinant and Rochefort since the outbreak of hostilities and practically all of these captives have been interned at Rheims. Most of them are Uhlans.

The government is transporting vast quantities of ammunition to all points along the eastern frontier on trains requisitioned for that purpose.

To encourage commerce during the war the French government, it is announced, will cover war risks on importations and exportations by sea. Vessels under the French flag will be covered to 80 per cent of their value while the total value of cargoes under the French flag or the flag of French allies or neutral states will be covered in consideration of a premium.

400 AMERICANS LEAVE GERMANY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rotterdam, Aug. 13.—Four hundred American refugees arrived here today on a special train from Berlin. They were accompanied by James W. Gerard, American ambassador to Germany.

The refugees will sail for the United States on a Dutch liner as soon as arrangements can be completed and Mr. Gerard will return to Berlin.

Berlin, (via Copenhagen and London), Aug. 13.—The German government today ordered that effective steps be taken to facilitate the departure of Americans from the country. With mobilization practically complete many railroad trains have been released from military service and these will be devoted to helping foreigners who wish to leave.

A special train carrying 400 Americans left for Holland this morning and preparations for the departure of other citizens are being pushed.

Cash is now being paid on letters of credit by the large banks and this is serving to relieve the fears of the Americans who were stranded here.

Outing at High Falls.

On invitation of Mr. Terwilliger, Mrs. McMillan, social worker for the Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Oughletree, county agent for dependent and defective children, took a party of boys to High Falls for a day's outing on Wednesday. A fine time was had by all.

Breakdown

Caused by Coffee

"I am satisfied," says a probminent physician, "that coffee is responsible in a great degree for the premature breakdown of our active men and women.

"They suffer from caffeine poisoning.

"Of the truth of this, there is not the shadow of a doubt. Our common sense tells us that the daily swallowing of caffeine" (the alkaloid in tea and coffee), "powerfully affecting heart and brain—is followed by nervous depression, and finally by more or less disastrous results.

"I believe if people in general would use a harmless, nutritious drink like Postum as a beverage in place of tea and coffee, their physical and mental condition would be much improved."

with happy results.

"There's a Reason"

Postum is a pure food-drink, made from wheat and a bit of molasses, containing the nutrition of the grain. No caffeine—no drugs—no harmful ingredient in Postum. A delicious, nourishing beverage.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum—must be boiled, 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—soluble—made in the cup, instantly, 30c and 50c tins.

Grocers everywhere sell both kinds and the cost per cup is about the same.

HEAVY GERMAN LOSSES REPORTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug. 13.—A Basel dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that, according to latest estimates, the Germans lost between 8,000 and 10,000 men in the fighting at Muelhausen.

The Swiss correspondent reports that the hospital facilities at Muelhausen proved inadequate to care for the wounded and that schools, hotels and churches had to be utilized, all being filled.

Finding it impossible to take care of all those suffering from wounds the civic authorities secured permission from the German and French troops to send special trains with hundreds of patients to Muelhausen and other towns.

BERMUDA GETS A MIDNIGHT SCARE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 13.—Three hundred passengers from Bermuda arrived here today on the Royal Mail packet Carribean and related stories of war-like preparations that have been going in Hamilton, Bermuda.

The passengers, mostly women, declared that practically every able bodied man on the island including Americans, was compelled to assist in digging trenches overlooking the hills. More than a score of German freight steamers, captured by the British cruisers, have been brought into the Hamilton port.

A French cruiser went into the Hamilton harbor a few nights ago, arriving after midnight and fired a salute. The natives thought it was the Germans bombarding the town.

BELGIANS ADMIT HEAVY LOSSES

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Brussels, Aug. 13.—The war office admitted today that the Belgian cavalry had suffered heavy losses in the fighting at Tirlemont, but declared that the allied Franco-Belgian infantry had checked the advance of the German forces. It is reported that heavy fighting is going on today and that the Germans have brought their artillery into play with deadly effect on the advance forces of the allies.

The Belgian Lancers, the finest cavalry of the kingdom, bore the brunt of the opening engagement at Tirlemont and fought with great valor, charging the Germans in the face of a heavy fire from machine guns. Describing one charge made by a small force of Lancers against 2,000 Uhlans the war office states that the Belgians killed 250 of the enemy, but they themselves lost only 25 men. Among the Belgians killed were Captain Knappen and Lieut. Count Van Der Burch.

Concluding its statement the war office said:

"The Lancers were checked by the machine guns but the Belgian infantry stopped the Germans."

Another official announcement read as follows:

"Belgian and French troops have effected a junction south of Brussels. The German advance in the Belgian provinces of Limburg and Brabant has been checked. The Germans are bringing up heavy artillery against Liege."

The government has restored communication with Liege by a roundabout route and today it was stated that not only were the besieged forts still holding out, but the Belgian troops to the west of the city had resumed the offensive and after a sharp struggle driven the Germans back, recapturing ground that had been lost.

One detachment of the Belgian cavalry, working around to the rear of the Germans, blew up a number of bridges and cut the enemy off from supplies. One report says that the German cavalry to the southwest of Liege was compelled to fall back.

The siege guns that have been brought to bear on Liege are the most powerful in the ordnance of the German army. They include six inch long guns, six inch howitzers and four inch mortars. As the Liege forts are equipped with massive guns, the greatest artillery duel of history is probably in progress today.

A number of messages reached the war office early today from King Albert, who is at Louvain. Their contents were not revealed, but the officials who saw them appeared to be satisfied with the situation as far as it had been revealed to them.

The citizens of Belgium were excited during the forenoon by publication of rumors that a German spy had been arrested near King Albert at Louvain. The report was not confirmed from official sources.

MORALIZING ON WAR.

The European War is young. There have not been any battles yet. The fighting has been merely skirmishes preliminary to the battles that are to come. The news allowed to filter through the censors' hands is meagre. In some quarters, the press has been accused of bias. That charge is unfounded and unjust. The newspapers are publishing all the news that comes, and if more of the happenings are not told, it is the fault of the censors in the various countries that are at war.

Every nation is putting its own story in the most favorable light possible, and is darkening the deeds of the enemy. Although we are feeling the effect of the war, we are at a sufficient distance, we think, to see the prejudice and discount it. If we are cynical, we smile even amid the horrors of the grim slaughter, and believe that we would be less biased in statement-making and news-telling.

To the eyes of Europe, some of our own American statements must have seemed strange in the past. When we have learned that Europe was laughing at us and was receiving our statements with head-shaking and smiles of derision, as a nation we have resented what we considered the foreigners' strange sense of humor. What right had Europe, or any other country, to question our statements? Such action has at different times brought us to a condition which is best expressed by the slang phrase, "hot under the collar."

It is human nature to put on its best bib and tucker. "Put your best fo— forward," is a motto th— been o— Adam's children— many generations. We could not do otherwise if we tried. So far as we are concerned, we see the right most clearly, we think, and we assure ourselves that we are in the right. We can see the right in others, too, we say to ourselves, for the reason that we, as a nation, are unprejudiced and more capable of distinguishing between right and wrong than most nations. But in taking that position as regards ourselves, we must not lose sight of the fact that every other nation regards itself in precisely the same way. We play politics, but so do other countries. The difference is that other nations use a battlefield as the game-board and human lives are the pawns. If we were situated differently, we might do the same thing.

In warfare, the aim is victory; the sacrifice of human life is merely an incident. "All's fair in love and war," is an old, old saying. But other phases besides might well be included in the category. Modern conditions have made the methods of victory in other walks more refined than they formerly were, but as long as human nature remains the same the policy pursued will not change. Human nature does not change, no matter what conditions of change are brought about in the social fabric. In all fields except our own we can see the unfairness in life's fight; not always, but generally we fail to see the injustice of the other fellows' cause. We are devoted to our own ideas, our own ideals, first, last and all time, and our devotion is strong because we are right—always.

If he had never written anything else, "Bobbie" Burns should be pedestalled for his brief exhortation:

O, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursel's as ithers see us!
It wad frae monie a blunder free us,
And foolish notion:
What airs in dress an' gait wad lea'e us,
And ev'n devotion!

Not only in war, but in peace also let us slake our thirst for criticism at the pool of toleration. If such a draught is needed in times of peace, how much more is it needed in the excitement of war.

One of the results of the European war that has escaped general attention is the fact that Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany lost the Nobel peace prize for 1914 by indulging in war. The Swedish Academy, which makes the selection, had decided to award the honor to him for his work on behalf of European peace during the Balkan war, but recent events have caused the friends of peace to reconsider their decision. The peace prize is still without an owner.

FOR RECREATION.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

Sometimes when one sees men, women and children flocking into the moving picture shows, when they look as if they were missing the real necessities of life, there's an easy impulse to scold and to say—no wonder they are poor to the end of their days. But then one looks closer at the tide hurrying by on its cheap pleasure-quest, and one is not so sure of her ground.

For some of them look weary, very weary indeed; others seem sad and mightily in need of something to chase away the tears and the old mournful thoughts; and some just look glad, glad to be released from the work of the day and glad for the chance to get out with the crowds.

And the children—if their faces failed to tell the story, there are some surprised folk in a certain big city who could tell where they stand.

Some earnest citizens in New York thought it time to arouse public interest, and it was decided to hold a mass meeting to discuss the problem of recreation for the children in one of the crowded districts. The purpose of the meeting was spread broadcast throughout the neighborhood, and moving pictures were promised, to give zest to the discussion.

The children in the district were called upon to carry the call abroad, and it was understood that, if they liked, they might come with their parents, for whom the meeting was distinctly intended. But the children were not invited.

Of course they knew very well what was going on, better still, what they wanted; and when the hour for the mass meeting arrived, a crowd of half a hundred youngsters was pounding on the door of the public school auditorium, where the meeting was to be held. And by the time the doors were to open the 50 had reached almost the proportions of a mob, parents, children and all. And when the doors were opened, the hundreds of youngsters crowded their way into the hall and literally screeched for moving pictures. They stood up in the seats, singing for moving pictures, worked their way to the edge of the platform itself, where they sat on the floor in tight little rows, their voices raised for moving pictures, in sharp, childish treble.

The crowds kept surging in, until at last the excess had to be driven away, but the moving picture song went merrily on. The managers of the meeting were bewildered, for they had expected the calmest of discussion, w— —ch— —docile recreation m— —quite fitting for them. With the managers dismayed, the parents mute, and the children wildly clamoring for pictures, there was nothing to do but throw one on the screen.

The effect was magical, for instantly the mass of shrieking children became docile and well behaved. The managers never learned what the parents thought, but when at last they paused for their bearings, they knew very well the burning desire of the children.

And think, as one may, that moving picture shows take many a nickel and dime from pockets that ought not to yield them at all for that purpose, one always comes back to the point that grown ups and children alike must have their hours of recreation. The men and women whose work is the most wearing and monotonous are the ones who have the fewest opportunities for play, yet they need it the most.

And when those who take their pleasures more prodigally are inclined to criticise the armies that drift to the "movies," perhaps they would do better to rejoice that some carefree way is opened where tired folk, sad folk, little-moneyed folk, may drift and forget their woes.

They work conscientiously and many times over-much during the day, and if the pictures are potent over the woes and the cares and the labors, let the pictures go on.

Some folk are urging that along with the playgrounds for children that are springing up in the waste places should come playgrounds for grown ups—yes, literally playgrounds, where men and women might have their games, their sports, their moving pictures, their fresh air and the like, and where they might forget all the things that they would be the brighter, the better and the healthier for forgetting.

Indeed, every city system in the world would do well to open the day playgrounds at night, if no more, and let the grown ups play, not with sand piles and other amusements for the kidlets, but after the fashion of grown ups, letting loose in the very spirit of play.

For one has only to watch the tide of humanity as it drifts to places that offer the mildest chances for recreation to know that one of its strongest instincts is to play. And good, wholesome opportunities are not found everywhere. There are the few who will drift—when they can—to the big, open spaces in the country and just loaf about on the ground, drinking in the scenery as they rest; but there are the many who must have something more diverting, and they drift—where they can.

Bad Barber.

Marie Lloyd, the English music hall artist, said in New York:

"You talk about your efficiency over here, but I think your immigration bureau is just about as efficient as the Mile End barber.

"A chap went into a barber's in the Mile End road to be shaved. The barber cut him and nicked him and gashed him. When the job was over the chap said:

"'Give me a drink of water, please.'

"'You aren't going to faint, I 'ope,' said the barber, handing him a glass.

"'No,' said the man mildly. 'No, I just wanted to see if my mouth'll hold water.'"—New York World.

Power of Eloquence.

C. E. Stewart, who spends his time writing great thoughts and declaring that Oscar W. Underwood is the greatest man in the world, volunteered his services as a stump speaker for the leader of the house in the campaign against Richmond P. Hobson for the Alabama senatorship.

At one little town Stewart spoke to a tremendous crowd which had assembled from all parts of the country. He surpassed himself. All the apt illustrations in history, all the beautiful legends in mythology, all the fiery passages in poetry, and all the glowing phrases regarding [illegible] of patriotism were at his command. They rushed from his lips like water through a sluice gate. He deluged his hearers with a flood of oratory. He was impassioned, he was impressive, he was grand. He had done wonders for Underwood.

The thunderous applause of thousands of people told him so. He knew it to be true. He thrilled with the consciousness of his power over the minds of men. And being in this state of mind he stood in the midst of the crowd, after speaking, and listened to the comments of the audience.

"What did you think of Stewart's speech?" asked one old farmer, stroking a fierce-looking military mustache.

"Well," replied another old fellow, running his fingers through his ample alfalfa whiskers, "I am of the opinion that six hours' rain would have done us a sight more good."—Popular Magazine.

The Secret.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, in her beautiful studio of white marble at Roslyn, said of an artist, recently deceased, whose work had been very popular:

"At a bal masque a group of girls demanded of a magician:

"Tell us—oh, tell us—how we may remain always young and always beautiful?"

"'Humph. Nothing easier,' grunted the magician. 'Get a million and stay single.'"—New York Telegraph.

TRAVEL IN BELGIUM VERY DANGEROUS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Brussels, Aug. 13.—German prisoners are being brought northward from the scene of action. Among the first captives of war to arrive in Louvain were four young German officers who attracted a great deal of attention as they were led through the street. Their spiked helmets had been covered with brown Holland cloth to render them less conspicuous and they seemed greatly dispirited.

In this respect the Belgians are at a disadvantage as their uniform, especially those of the cavalrymen are brilliantly colored. The German troops of all ranks of the service have been equipped with grey field uniforms which easily melt into the color of the fields and roadways.

Travel through Belgium is dangerous to the last degree. The allies are exercising extraordinary precautions. Motor cars trying to cross country held by the Belgians, French and English soldiers are stopped by hundreds of sentries. If a motor car does not stop immediately upon a demand for the countersign the nearest post is likely to fire a volley into it. A Belgian nobleman, Baron von Zuylen, and a private soldier, who was acting as his chauffeur, were killed in this way on the Namur-Liege road while engaged in carrying provisions for the Belgian soldiers.

When the countersign was demanded the baron's car slowed up and the proper word was given. However, a nearby patriot noting that the car had not halted, supposed that the automobile contained a German officer who was trying to escape. Half a dozen Belgian cavalrymen galloped up and emptied their carbines into the motor car killing both occupants.

In spite of the danger attending travel from town to town, many travellers are taking the risk. In view of the numerous bodies of civilians who are passing through the country the war office has been highly successful in preventing a leakage of information relative to the operations of the Belgian armies.

It is pretty well known where the French forces are located although all war correspondents here have been pledged to secrecy not to reveal this information at this time.

Many stories of the brutality of the German troops continue to reach this city. It is said that, when German cavalry enters a hostile town, the officers first take possession of the municipal funds and the banks. All available funds are carried off. In one place, so it is said, in one message from the front, a German officer, after taking possession of a Belgian town, came upon a draft in the strong box in the office of the municipal treasurer. The officer took it to a bank where [illegible] The draft was cashed in the regular way.

High praise is being given to the Duchess of Sutherland, the Countess Chaucourt and other well-known women who have established a hospital corps and ambulance service for care of the wounded. The hospital service has been installed in the Cercle Artistique, the most aristocratic club in Brussels, where operating tables and cots have been placed.

King Albert is taking an active part in directing the operations of the Belgians. A telegram from Louvain says that the king passed through there in a muddy, travel stained automobile nearly escaping recognition. The Belgian monarch was in a soiled, mud-stained uniform and was without any attendants. His motor car, not bearing any indication of the rank of its occupant was continuously held up by sentinels who roughly demanded the countersign.

Members of the government who are questioned relative to operations at the front, declare that they are being kept in ignorance by the war office. A member of the chamber of deputies, upon being interrogated as to the strength and position of the Belgian forces said:

"I don't even know where general army headquarters are located."

NATIONAL LEAGUE'S CRACK TEAM-MAKER.

Manager George Stallings.

Just what George Stallings would have been able to do with the Yankees had he been left in charge for another year, he is now demonstrating by doing the same thing for the Boston Braves. Everyone knows the story of how the Braves have jumped from the bottom of the league to second place in a little over a month, and how they are now menacing the Giants in first position. All credit is due to Stallings, who is called the most constructive manager in all baseball.

WATERY HUMOR.

The Brand of Practical Jokes That Royalty Seems to Like.

King Alfonso of Spain delights in playing practical jokes upon his friends and members of his household. Recently when Lord and Lady Wimborne were his guests, in connection with the visit of the English polo team, he showed them through the wonderful gardens attached to the royal palace at Madrid.

Leading his guests into a trellised arbor, the king stepped to one side, pressed a button, and both English and Spanish were soaked by a deluge of water that poured down from a concealed shower bath. The king was convulsed with merriment, and his guests had to laugh with royalty, whether they liked the joke or not.

The late King Edward, it is related, when a young man, at a house party decided to take a fall out of a rather pompous fellow guest. Aided by one of his suit, he placed a bucket filled with water over the door of his room and then sent for the pompous one.

As the latter entered the room the bucket was upset and he was drenched, to Albert Edward's great joy. The victim, however, took the jest in sorry part and, making his excuses to the hostess, returned to town at once.

The next morning when he opened his Times he saw this personal advertisement:

If B. will return to his friends all will be forgiven him. A. E.

Upon another occasion, at a private view of the pictures at an exhibition in the old New gallery, Albert Edward had a hearty laugh. An artist, who was somewhat of a poseur, wishing to impress the Prince of Wales with his knowledge of art, kept walking backward, exclaiming that he would indicate where the best view of the picture was to be had.

The prince nudged his companions and indicated they should keep quiet. As a result the artist was not warned, and he stumbled backward into the basin of the fountain among the goldfish. Neither the artist nor the goldfish saw the joke, but Albert Edward and his friends did.—New York Sun.

Last year the Chicago Nationals were taking a long jump on their exhibition tour, and for some reason their train became stalled for a couple of hours. There was no diner attached, so the secretary told the conductor to wire ahead to a certain town and have seats reserved at the station restaurant for the party. This the conductor did. On arriving at the town thirty-two half starved athletes piled out of their car and hustled for the eating place. As they sprinted inside they were met by the proprietor, who threw up both hands in amazement. Only nine chairs had been reserved, the remainder being occupied by other famished travelers. "Why, the wire I received said a baseball nine was coming, so what else would I do?" was his explanation.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

"WHAT ELSE COULD I DO?"

Tennyson's Luck.

The story of how Lord Tennyson won the Newdigate prize at Oxford is worth telling. Three examiners were selected to pass judgment on the competitors' efforts, and the last of these to whom Tennyson's poem "Timbuctoo" was submitted, being of an indolent disposition and seeing what he took to be the letter "g," signifying "Good," appended to several of the lines, affixed, without troubling to judge for himself the merits of the work, a similar mark of approval and thus secured for the future laureate the coveted prize. That same evening the three examiners met.

"Whatever," abruptly demanded he whose task it had been first to read the poem, "made you think so highly of young Tennyson's effort?"

"Why," cried the others, in unanimity of surprise, "we only followed your lead. You were forever marking the lines with 'g.'"

"A 'g!'" cried their colleague. "That wasn't a 'g'—that was a note of interrogation to signify that for the life of me I couldn't make out what the fellow meant."

Miss Margaret Wilson's formula for dispelling the heat with a "cheerful smile" is fair philosophy. But it is doubtful if the most cheerful smile will restore the starch to the wilted collar.

MORALIZING ON WAR.

The European War is young. There have not been any battles yet. The fighting has been merely skirmishes preliminary to the battles that are to come. The news allowed to filter through the censors' hands is meagre. In some quarters, the press has been accused of bias. That charge is unfounded and unjust. The newspapers are publishing all the news that comes, and if more of the happenings are not told, it is the fault of the censors in the various countries that are at war.

Every nation is putting its own story in the most favorable light possible, and is darkening the deeds of the enemy. Although we are feeling the effect of the war, we are at a sufficient distance, we think, to see the prejudice and discount it. If we are cynical, we smile even amid the horrors of the grim slaughter, and believe that we would be less biased in statement-making and news-telling.

To the eyes of Europe, some of our own American statements must have seemed strange in the past. When we have learned that Europe was laughing at us and was receiving our statements with head-shaking and smiles of derision, as a nation we have resented what we considered the foreigners' strange sense of humor. What right had Europe, or any other country, to question our statements? Such action has at different times brought us to a condition which is best expressed by the slang phrase, "hot under the collar."

It is human nature to put on its best bib and tucker. "Put your best foot forward," is a motto th[illegible] been a part of Adam's children [illegible] many generations. We could not do otherwise if we tried. So far as we are concerned, we see the right most clearly, we think, and we assure ourselves that we are in the right. We can see the right in others, too, we say to ourselves, for the reason that we, as a nation, are unprejudiced and more capable of distinguishing between right and wrong than most nations. But in taking that position as regards ourselves, we must not lose sight of the fact that every other nation regards itself in precisely the same way. We play politics, but so do other countries. The difference is that other nations use a battlefield as the game-board and human lives are the pawns. If we were situated differently, we might do the same thing.

In warfare, the aim is victory; the sacrifice of human life is merely an incident. "All's fair in love and war," is an old, old saying. But other phases besides might well be included in the category. Modern conditions have made the methods of victory in other walks more refined than they formerly were, but as long as human nature remains the same the policy pursued will not change. Human nature does not change, no matter what conditions of change are brought about in the social fabric. In all fields except our own we can see the unfairness in life's fight; not always, but generally we fail to see the injustice of the other fellows' cause. We are devoted to our own ideas, our own ideals, first, last and all time, and our devotion is strong because we are right—always.

If he had never written anything else, "Bobbie" Burns should be pedestalled for his brief exhortation:

O, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see ourse'l's as ithers see us!
It wad frae monie a blunder free us.
And foolish notion:
What airs in dress an' gait wad lea'e us.
And ev'n devotion!

Not only in war, but in peace also let us slake our thirst for criticism at the pool of toleration. If such a draught is needed in times of peace, how much more is it needed in the excitement of war.

One of the results of the European war that has escaped general attention is the fact that Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany lost the Nobel peace prize for 1914 by indulging in war. The Swedish Academy, which makes the selection, had decided to award the honor to him for his work on behalf of European peace during the Balkan war, but recent events have caused the friends of peace to reconsider their decision. The peace prize is still without an owner.

FOR RECREATION.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

Sometimes when one sees men, women and children flocking into the moving picture shows, when they look as if they were missing the real necessities of life, there's an easy impulse to scold and to say—no wonder they are poor to the end of their days. But then one looks closer at the tide hurrying by on its cheap pleasure-quest, and one is not so sure of her ground.

For some of them look weary, very weary indeed; others seem sad and mightily in need of something to chase away the tears and the old mournful thoughts; and some just look glad, glad to be released from the work of the day and glad for the chance to get out with the crowds.

And the children—if their faces failed to tell the story, there are some surprised folk in a certain big city who could tell where they stand.

Some earnest citizens in New York thought it time to arouse public interest, and it was decided to hold a mass meeting to discuss the problem of recreation for the children in one of the crowded districts. The purpose of the meeting was spread broadcast throughout the neighborhood, and moving pictures were promised, to give zest to the discussion.

The children in the district were called upon to carry the call abroad, and it was understood that, if they liked, they might come with their parents, for whom the meeting was distinctly intended. But the children were not invited.

Of course they knew very well what was going on, better still, what they wanted; and when the hour for the mass meeting arrived, a crowd of half a hundred youngsters was pounding on the door of the public school auditorium, where the meeting was to be held. And by the time the doors were to open the 50 had reached almost the proportions of a mob, parents, children and all. And when the doors were opened, the hundreds of youngsters crowded their way into the hall and literally screeched for moving pictures. They stood up in the seats, singing for moving pictures, worked their way to the edge of the platform itself, where they sat on the floor in tight little rows, their voices raised for moving pictures, in sharp, childish treble.

The crowds kept surging in, until at last the excess had to be driven away, but the moving picture song went merrily on. The managers of the meeting were bewildered, for they had expected the calmest of discussion, [illegible] docile [illegible] recreation [illegible] quite fitting for them. With the managers dismayed, the parents mute, and the children wildly clamoring for pictures, there was nothing to do but throw one on the screen.

The effect was magical, for instantly the mass of shrieking children became docile and well behaved. The managers never learned what the parents thought, but when at last they paused for their bearings, they knew very well the burning desire of the children.

And think, as one may, that moving picture shows take many a nickel and dime from pockets that ought not to yield them at all for that purpose, one always comes back to the point that grown ups and children alike must have their hours of recreation. The men and women whose work is the most wearing and monotonous are the ones who have the fewest opportunities for play, yet they need it the most.

And when those who take their pleasures more prodigally are inclined to criticise the armies that drift to the "movies," perhaps they would do better to rejoice that some carefree way is opened where tired folk, sad folk, little-moneyed folk, may drift and forget their woes.

They work conscientiously and many times over-much during the day, and if the pictures are potent over the woes and the cares and the labors, let the pictures go on.

Some folk are urging that along with the playgrounds for children that are springing up in the waste places should come playgrounds for grown ups—yes, literally playgrounds, where men and women might have their games, their sports, their moving pictures, their fresh air and the like, and where they might forget all the things that they would be the brighter, the better and the healthier for forgetting.

Indeed, every city system in the world would do well to open the day playgrounds at night, if no more, and let the grown ups play, not with sand piles and other amusements for the kidlets, but after the fashion of grown ups, letting loose in the very spirit of play.

For one has only to watch the tide of humanity as it drifts to places that offer the mildest chances for recreation to know that one of its strongest instincts is to play. And good, wholesome opportunities are not found everywhere. There are the few who will drift—when they can—to the big, open spaces in the country and just loaf about on the ground, drinking in the scenery as they rest; but there are the many who must have something more diverting, and they drift—where they can.

Power of Eloquence.

C. E. Stewart, who spends his time writing great thoughts and declaring that Oscar W. Underwood is the greatest man in the world, volunteered his services as a stump speaker for the leader of the house in the campaign against Richmond P. Hobson for the Alabama senatorship.

At one little town Stewart spoke to a tremendous crowd which had assembled from all parts of the country. He surpassed himself. All the apt illustrations in history, all the beautiful legends in mythology, all the fiery passages in poetry, and [illegible] of [illegible] otism were at his command. It rushed from his lips like water through a sluice gate. He deluged his hearers with a flood of oratory. He was impassioned, he was impressive, he was grand. He had done wonders for Underwood.

The thunderous applause of thousands of people told him so. He knew it to be true. He thrilled with the consciousness of his power over the minds of men. And being in this state of mind he stood in the midst of the crowd, after speaking, and listened to the comments of the audience.

"What did you think of Stewart's speech?" asked one old farmer, stroking a fierce-looking military mustache.

"Well," replied another old fellow, running his fingers through his ample alfalfa whiskers, "I am of the opinion that six hours' rain would have done us a sight more good."—Popular Magazine.

TRAVEL IN BELGIUM VERY DANGEROUS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Brussels, Aug. 13.—German prisoners are being brought northward from the scene of action. Among the first captives of war to arrive in Louvain were four young German officers who attracted a great deal of attention as they were led through the street. Their spiked helmets had been covered with brown Holland cloth to render them less conspicuous and they seemed greatly dispirited.

In this respect the Belgians are at a disadvantage as their uniform, especially those of the cavalrymen are brilliantly colored. The German troops of all ranks of the service have been equipped with grey field uniforms which easily melt into the color of the fields and roadways.

Travel through Belgium is dangerous to the last degree. The allies are exercising extraordinary precautions. Motor cars trying to cross country held by the Belgians, French and English soldiers are stopped by hundreds of sentries. If a motor car does not stop immediately upon a demand for the countersign the nearest post is likely to fire a volley into it. A Belgian nobleman, Baron von Zuylen, and a private soldier, who was acting as his chauffeur, were killed in this way on the Namur-Liege road while engaged in carrying provisions for the Belgian soldiers.

When the countersign was demanded the baron's car slowed up and the proper word was given. However, a nearby patriot noting that the car had not halted, supposed that the automobile contained a German officer who was trying to escape. Half a dozen Belgian cavalrymen galloped up and emptied their carbines into the motor car killing both occupants.

In spite of the danger attending travel from town to town, many travellers are taking the risk. In view of the numerous bodies of civilians who are passing through the country the war office has been highly successful in preventing a leakage of information relative to the operations of the Belgian armies.

It is pretty well known where the French forces are located although all war correspondents here have been pledged to secrecy not to reveal this information at this time.

Many stories of the brutality of the German troops continue to reach this city. It is said that, when German cavalry enters a hostile town, the officers first take possession of the municipal funds and the banks. All available funds are carried off. In one place, so it is said, in one message from the front, a German officer, after taking possession of a Belgian town, came upon a draft in the strong box in the office of the municipal treasurer. The officer took it to a bank where [illegible] The draft was cashed in the regular way.

High praise is being given to the Duchess of Sutherland, the Countess Chaucourt and other well-known women who have established a hospital corps and ambulance service for care of the wounded. The hospital service has been installed in the Cercle Artistique, the most aristocratic club in Brussels, where operating tables and cots have been placed.

King Albert is taking an active part in directing the operations of the Belgians. A telegram from Louvain says that the king passed through there in a muddy, travel stained automobile nearly escaping recognition. The Belgian monarch was in a soiled, mud-stained uniform and was without any attendants. His motor car, not bearing any indication of the rank of its occupant was continuously held up by sentinels who roughly demanded the countersign.

Members of the government who are questioned relative to operations at the front, declare that they are being kept in ignorance by the war office. A member of the chamber of deputies, upon being interrogated as to the strength and position of the Belgian forces said:

"I don't even know where general army headquarters are located."

NATIONAL LEAGUE'S CRACK TEAM-MAKER.

Manager George Stallings.

Just what George Stallings would have been able to do with the Yankees had he been left in charge for another year, he is now demonstrating by doing the same thing for the Boston Braves. Everyone knows the story of how the Braves have jumped from the bottom of the league to second place in a little over a month, and how they are now menacing the Giants in first position. All credit is due to Stallings, who is called the most constructive manager in all baseball.

WATERY HUMOR.

The Brand of Practical Jokes That Royalty Seems to Like.

King Alfonso of Spain delights in playing practical jokes upon his friends and members of his household. Recently when Lord and Lady Wimborne were his guests, in connection with the visit of the English polo team, he showed them through the wonderful gardens attached to the royal palace at Madrid.

Leading his guests into a trellised arbor, the king stepped to one side, pressed a button, and both English and Spanish were soaked by a deluge of water that poured down from a concealed shower bath. The king was convulsed with merriment, and his guests had to laugh with royalty, whether they liked the joke or not.

The late King Edward, it is related, when a young man, at a house party decided to take a fall out of a rather pompous fellow guest. Aided by one of his suit, he placed a bucket filled with water over the door of his room and then sent for the pompous one.

As the latter entered the room the bucket was upset and he was drenched, to Albert Edward's great joy. The victim, however, took the jest in sorry part and, making his excuses to the hostess, returned to town at once.

The next morning when he opened his Times he saw this personal advertisement:

If B. will return to his friends all will be forgiven him. A. E.

Upon another occasion, at a private view of the pictures at an exhibition in the old New gallery, Albert Edward had a hearty laugh. An artist, who was somewhat of a poseur, wishing to impress the Prince of Wales with his knowledge of art, kept walking backward, exclaiming that he would indicate where the best view of the picture was to be had.

The prince nudged his companions and indicated they should keep quiet. As a result the artist was not warned, and he stumbled backward into the basin of the fountain among the goldfish. Neither the artist nor the goldfish saw the joke, but Albert Edward and his friends did.—New York Sun.

An Astonished Landlord.

Last year the Chicago Nationals were taking a long jump on their exhibition tour, and for some reason their train became stalled for a couple of hours. There was no diner attached, so the secretary told the conductor to wire ahead to a certain town and have seats reserved at the station restaurant for the party. This the conductor did. On arriving at the town thirty-two half starved athletes piled out of their car and hustled for the eating place. As they sprinted inside they were met by the proprietor, who threw up both hands in amazement. Only nine chairs had been reserved, the remainder being occupied by other famished travelers. "Why, the wire I received said a baseball nine was coming, so what else would I do?" was his explanation.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

"WHAT ELSE COULD I DO?"

Tennyson's Luck.

The story of how Lord Tennyson won the Newdigate prize at Oxford is worth telling. Three examiners were selected to pass judgment on the competitors' efforts, and the last of these to whom Tennyson's poem "Timbuctoo" was submitted, being of an indolent disposition and seeing what he took to be the letter "g," signifying "Good," appended to several of the lines, affixed, without troubling to judge for himself the merits of the work, a similar mark of approval and thus secured for the future laureate the coveted prize. That same evening the three examiners met.

"Whatever," abruptly demanded he whose task it had been first to read the poem, "made you think so highly of young Tennyson's effort?"

"Why," cried the others, in unanimity of surprise, "we only followed your lead. You were forever marking the lines with 'g.'"

"A 'g!'" cried their colleague. "That wasn't a 'g'—that was a note of interrogation to signify that for the life of me I couldn't make out what the fellow meant."

Miss Margaret Wilson's formula for dispelling the heat with a "cheerful smile" is fair philosophy. But it is doubtful if the most cheerful smile will restore the starch to the wilted collar.

REFUGEES ARRIVE IN NEW YORK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, August 13.—The largest portion of the 900 American refugees who arrived here last night from Europe on the liner Philadelphia, left for their homes today. The majority of them who were in a penniless condition when the ship docked were met at the pier by friends with money or were apprised by telegram that funds awaited them at the different telegraph offices.

A committee appointed by Mayor Mitchel gave immediate relief today to all the Americans who did not receive money upon their arrival, and has guaranteed to all the unfortunates that they will advance money for transportation tomorrow if funds are not received from their homes.

Refreshed by a night of uninterrupted sleep, the remaining refugees today looked back upon some of their experiences as being of a humorous nature. They laid particular stress upon the conditions aboard the Philadelphia, which carried 1,013 passengers, including 113 aliens—perhaps the biggest load in her career. Six hundred Americans occupied the cabin of the ship, crowding it to its extreme limit. In the steerage there were about 198 Americans, while about 100 men, unable to get rooms of any kind, slept on the floors and tables each night during the voyage.

Among those who had to take quarters in the steerage—and glad to get even such accommodations—were Mrs. W. C. Barrington of Philadelphia, daughter of Rear Admiral Kane, and a half dozen New York city women.

The passengers today were high in their praise for the efforts of some of their fellow passengers who formed a committee aboard and which did everything possible to better conditions. Among the members of the committee were the following:

William Wood Plankington of Milwaukee, chairman; John Gregory, Rochester, N. Y.; John A. Wilson (cousin of President Wilson), Franklin, Pa.

All of the passengers told of the stirring times in Europe that proceeded the declaration of war by Germany on Russia and of subsequent events. Most of the passengers, in addition to getting back penniless, also were without their trunks.

"We weren't much concerned about baggage," declared Martin Voget of New York, assistant sub-treasurer of the United States. "All we were keen about was getting aboard the first ship that sailed."

Miss Mary Wilderman of Pittsburgh, probably was the only one who wasn't happy over getting back to her native land. She had gone to Europe to study music four years ago and was just having the finishing touches applied in Germany when the war broke out.

"Oh, it's so disappointing," she said with tears in her eyes. "I did so want to finish up my studies. Just a few months more and the work of four years would have been ended. Now I must wait until the war is over."

Chairman Plankington, of the relief committee aboard ship, said the passengers took their discomforts with good grace.

"We all were so glad to be on the ship and away from Europe that we would have stood for almost anything," he declared.

"It was stormy during the first few days of the voyage.

"We had plenty of good food aboard ship, but we ran a bit short of water during the last two days.

"When we left London the city was in a wild state of excitement. There were many stranded Americans there.

"We were the last ship out of the Southampton harbor, and when we pulled away from the dock there were hundreds of Americans there waving their tickets at us. Many of the women were in tears."

Perhaps those suffragettes wouldn't have tried to blow up Bobby Burns' cottage if he had written it, "A gal's a man for a' that."

A high school professor, drawn on a jury, was late in court, and the judge made him stay in during recess. That must tickle his pupils.

Miss Commissioner Davis' triumph over the rebellious prisoners on Blackwell's island is militancy of a high order properly directed.

If the fool who didn't know it was loaded could only hit the man who rocks the boat, few would object to his possession of firearms.

Now the man who has recovered from his vacation eyes with pitying contempt the man who is in the throes of preparing for a vacation.

Paris has just completed a census of her trees. Possibly the census was ordered in connection with a national search for new cabinet material.

What foundations for the fish stories of a great nation lie in the 4,000,000,000 spawn distributed in the fiscal year just passed by the bureau of fisheries!

Advisable as it may be to cultivate the "smile that won't come off," there is far greater need for a similar cheerful disposition on the part of pants buttons.

If Greece makes as good a thing out of the battleships as we did of the Louisiana purchase at about the same price, her ancient glories will soon be restored.

A Chicago man committed suicide because his wife nagged him for fooling away a quarter getting his hair cut. It is surprising to learn that he had any hair.

The battleship Mississippi, purchased by Greece, has been rechristened the Kilkis. If she had been sold to Russia the vessel might now be rejoicing under a six syllable name.

The Price Paid For a Wife

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Father," said Paul Alexandrovitch, "will you not buy Tatiana for me? We love each other. Tatiana is a serf, while I am free. I cannot marry her unless her master will sell her."

"I fear, my son," replied the father, "that the count will not sell Tatiana. I have never been on friendly terms with him, he being a rich landowner and I a small farmer. Besides, there was that trouble about the woodcutting. No, I do not believe he will grant any request of mine. But I will go to him and offer him a good price for the girl."

That was a time when a large proportion of the Russian people were serfs. Paul and Tatiana had played together as children when the little ones of other nations were at school, for education of the lower classes has never been permitted in Russia, and after they were old enough to work they continued the intimacy. And now that they had reached a marriageable age the fact of Tatiana's slavery loomed up a great barrier between them.

Alexander, Paul's father, counted up the money that he might spare to buy Tatiana and found by straining a point he could gather 1,000 rubles. He went to Count Korloff and very humbly told him of the affection between the boy and the girl and asking him if he would not make them happy by selling the latter so that they could be married. "I will give them a slice off my farm," he added, "and, as for the price, I will pay you 1,000 rubles."

"I cannot spare Tatiana," replied the count. "The countess needs her to dress her hair."

The refusal came so curtly that the farmer dared not pursue the matter. He went away and told his son the result of his mission. Paul was crushed by the news, for in Russia the autocratic system has prevailed for so many centuries that the weak—until the recent revolution—did not think of resisting the strong. Paul told Tatiana of the reason given for refusing to sell her, and she said that she had never dressed the countess' hair.

Paul had a great many friends, and Tatiana was also much beloved. All the world loves a lover, and their case excited a good deal of sympathy. A few of those who heard of the case clubbed together to add to the price that Alexander could raise to buy Tatiana, and one of them went to the count and asked him if he would not fix a price on the girl. He was a very avaricious man, and, thinking this might be an opportunity to get a good deal of money for what was not worth very much to him, he replied that if 5,000 rubles were offered he would accept them.

An effort was made to raise 5,000 rubles, which was the amount required in addition to what Alexander could give. But there is no great wealth in Russia except among those connected with the government, and the subscriptions came in such small sums that the amount finally subscribed was far below what was required.

The matter looked hopeless when Paul went one day to do some work for one Mouriensieff, a well to do man of the middle class. In talking with Paul he learned about his love affair and how he and Tatiana were made miserable by Count Korloff's meanness. Mouriensieff asked Paul how much was lacking altogether of the fund to buy Tatiana, and Paul said that it was 1,600 rubles ($800). Then Mouriensieff told Paul that he would lend him the money at the legal interest and he could pay off the loan in eight years, or 200 rubles a year.

Paul accepted the proposition gratefully and sent word to the count that he was ready to buy Tatiana, paying 5,000 rubles for her. Count Korloff was astonished that so much money could have been raised for such a purpose, and it occurred to him that, after so much had been got together, a little more might be added. He replied that he had found a new use for Tatiana that made her much more valuable, but, since he did not wish to stand between her and Paul Alexandrovitch, he would complete the bargain for 5,500 rubles.

Paul's disappointment was all he could bear. He went to Mouriensieff with tears in his eyes to tell him of the failure.

"It would be of no avail," said the latter, "to continue to follow such a man up the scale of his prices. Let the matter rest for awhile."

Paul took this to mean that he would never possess the girl he loved and went away sorrowful.

A few weeks after this when Paul was working in a field a messenger from Count Korloff came to him and said that the count had decided to accept 5,000 rubles for Tatiana. Paul replied that he did not know if the money would now be forthcoming, but he would make inquiries. He did so and succeeded in collecting the necessary amount. But just as he was about to start with it to the count a man rode up to the house where he was and scattered printed copies of a ukase of the czar. Paul read one of them and threw his cap in the air with a shout:

"The Little Father has freed the serfs!"

And so it was that Count Korloff received nothing for Tatiana. She was free to marry Paul, and no wedding among those people was celebrated with greater rejoicings than hers.

Swat the dirt and the flies will disappear.

Theories cause us more worry than do facts.

A grouch is one of the most useless of burdens.

Paris has just completed a census of her trees. Possibly the census was ordered in connection with a national search for new cabinet material.

What foundations for the fish stories of a great nation lie in the 4,000,000,000 spawn distributed in the fiscal year just passed by the bureau of fisheries!

Advisable as it may be to cultivate the "smile that won't come off," there is far greater need for a similar cheerful disposition on the part of pants buttons.

If Greece makes as good a thing out of the battleships as we did of the Louisiana purchase at about the same price, her ancient glories will soon be restored.

A Chicago man committed suicide because his wife nagged him for fooling away a quarter getting his hair cut. It is surprising to learn that he had any hair.

The battleship Mississippi, purchased by Greece, has been rechristened the Kilkis. If she had been sold to Russia the vessel might now be rejoicing under a six syllable name.

The Price Paid For a Wife

"Father," said Paul Alexandrovitch, "will you not buy Tatiana for me? We love each other. Tatiana is a serf, while I am free. I cannot marry her unless her master will sell her."

"I fear, my son," replied the father, "that the count will not sell Tatiana. I have never been on friendly terms with him, he being a rich landowner and I a small farmer. Besides, there was that trouble about the woodcutting. No, I do not believe he will grant any request of mine. But I will go to him and offer him a good price for the girl."

That was a time when a large proportion of the Russian people were serfs. Paul and Tatiana had played together as children when the little ones of other nations were at school, for education of the lower classes has never been permitted in Russia, and after they were old enough to work they continued the intimacy. And now that they had reached a marriageable age the fact of Tatiana's slavery loomed up a great barrier between them.

Alexander, Paul's father, counted up the money that he might spare to buy Tatiana and found by straining a point he could gather 1,000 rubles. He went to Count Korloff and very humbly told him of the affection between the boy and the girl and asking him if he would not make them happy by selling the latter so that they could be married. "I will give them a slice off my farm," he added, "and, as for the price, I will pay you 1,000 rubles."

"I cannot spare Tatiana," replied the count. "The countess needs her to dress her hair."

The refusal came so curtly that the farmer dared not pursue the matter. He went away and told his son the result of his mission. Paul was crushed by the news, for in Russia the autocratic system has prevailed for so many centuries that the weak—until the recent revolution—did not think of resisting the strong. Paul told Tatiana of the reason given for refusing to sell her, and she said that she had never dressed the countess' hair.

Paul had a great many friends, and Tatiana was also much beloved. All the world loves a lover, and their case excited a good deal of sympathy. A few of those who heard of the case clubbed together to add to the price that Alexander could raise to buy Tatiana, and one of them went to the count and asked him if he would not fix a price on the girl. He was a very avaricious man, and, thinking this might be an opportunity to get a good deal of money for what was not worth very much to him, he replied that if 5,000 rubles were offered he would accept them.

The effort was made to raise 5,000 rubles, which was the amount required in addition to what Alexander could give. But there is no great wealth in Russia except among those connected with the government, and the subscriptions came in such small sums that the amount finally subscribed was far below what was required.

The matter looked hopeless when Paul went one day to do some work for one Mouriensieff, a well to do man of the middle class. In talking with Paul he learned about his love affair and how he and Tatiana were made miserable by Count Korloff's meanness. Mouriensieff asked Paul how much was lacking altogether of the fund to buy Tatiana, and Paul said that it was 1,600 rubles ($800). Then Mouriensieff told Paul that he would lend him the money at the legal interest and he could pay off the loan in eight years, or 200 rubles a year.

Paul accepted the proposition gratefully and sent word to the count that he was ready to buy Tatiana, paying 5,000 rubles for her. Count Korloff was astonished that so much money could have been raised for such a purpose, and it occurred to him that, after so much had been got together, a little more might be added. He replied that he had found a new use for Tatiana that made her much more valuable, but, since he did not wish to stand between her and Paul Alexandrovitch, he would complete the bargain for 5,500 rubles.

Paul's disappointment was all he could bear. He went to Mouriensieff with tears in his eyes to tell him of the failure.

"It would be of no avail," said the latter, "to continue to follow such a man up the scale of his prices. Let the matter rest for awhile."

Paul took this to mean that he would never possess the girl he loved and went away sorrowful.

A few weeks after this when Paul was working in a field a messenger from Count Korloff came to him and said that the count had decided to accept 5,000 rubles for Tatiana. Paul replied that he did not know if the money would now be forthcoming, but he would make inquiries. He did so and succeeded in collecting the necessary amount. But just as he was about to start with it to the count a man rode up to the house where he was and scattered printed copies of a ukase of the czar. Paul read one of them and threw his cap in the air with a shout:

"The Little Father has freed the serfs!"

And so it was that Count Korloff received nothing for Tatiana. She was free to marry Paul, and no wedding among those people was celebrated with greater rejoicings than hers.

Swat the dirt and the flies will disappear.

Theories cause us more worry than do facts.

A grouch is one of the most useless of burdens.

H. M. S. ESSEX CONVOYING CEDRIC TO PORT.

This photograph of the English battleship Essex was snapped from the deck of the Cedric, the giant liner which it protected from German cruisers on its way across the Atlantic. The Essex is now prowling along the Atlantic coast in search of prizes of war. She came inside Sandy Hook Tuesday and was sighted from Quarantine but immediately turned about and, steaming east, was soon lost to view.

Mrs. Hesley and family visited Mrs. Hesley's parents at Phoenicia.

One has to look to find the creek and sort of guess at it by the stony bed. New York would find a break in confidence if it had to rely on it now. But some day this break will have to come, and the water board may turn around and stop up the Croton leaks? But after the gateway to the Catskills has been destroyed.

In a "Health Hint" note it stated that all drinking water should be covered—a cover for the water pail and so on around. Your correspondent thinks that New York city will have quite a time to clasp a lid on the Ashokan reservoir. If she does it probably will have to be "grafted" on.

The townsmen miss the meadows of hay land in the water basin.

SAMSONVILLE.

F. Bell came to Phoenicia with a nice lot of huckleberries for sale.

Mrs. Hesley and family visited Mrs. Hesley's parents at Phoenicia.

One has to look to find the creek and sort of guess at it by the stony bed. New York would find a break in confidence if it had to rely on it now. But some day this break will have to come, and the water board may turn around and stop up the Croton leaks? But after the gateway to the Catskills has been destroyed.

In a "Health Hint" note it stated that all drinking water should be covered—a cover for the water pail and so on around. Your correspondent thinks that New York city will have quite a time to clasp a lid on the Ashokan reservoir. If she does it probably will have to be "grafted" on.

The townsmen miss the meadows of hay land in the water basin.

SAMSONVILLE.

REPENTANT ROBBER STRANDED HERE

Deserted by Woman Companion, Syracuse Man Surrenders to the Police and Tells His Tale of Woe.

Stricken with remorse after having been deserted by the women he took to New York on the proceeds of a burglary of his employer's store in Syracuse a few days ago, a young man approached Policeman Reardon at the West Shore station on Wednesday afternoon about 5:30 o'clock and asked to be taken into custody. He explained to the officer that he had robbed a store in Syracuse and wanted to be taken back for trial.

Reardon took the man to the city hall and after a questioning by Chief of Police Wood said his name was Tracy P. Bullard and told of having entered the Alvin cigar store on South Salina street at 2 o'clock in the morning and stealing $110 from the safe. He had been employed by the concern which operates a chain of stores in central New York. With a woman he started for New York to see the sights and blew in what money he had except some of the proceeds of the robbery.

Wednesday they decided to go back home and he gave the woman $60 just before reaching Kingston. Stepping from the train to get something to eat and a drink he was detained longer than he thought. When he returned to the station the train and his sweetheart had gone. For a time he roamed about the city and then concluded to give himself up as that was the only way he could get back to Syracuse and stand punishment for his crime and also to have revenge on the faithless woman who took his money and left him stranded in a strange town. When the youthful burglar took account of stock he had less than a dollar in his possession.

Chief Wood took his statements and then called up the police of Syracuse, who replied that Bullard was wanted and an officer would be sent at once. Bullard is about 28 years old, well dressed and of more than ordinary intelligence. He was morose after telling his story and seemed to be very repentant.

SAUGERTIES.

Saugerties, Aug. 13.—Miss Katherine Post is spending the week end in Smith's Landing.

P. C. Smith has completed installing two bath rooms in the residence of William Becker on Livingston street.

A meeting for the purpose of forming a club in the town of Saugerties to promote and support the candidacy of William Sulzer at the polls for governor of the state of New York, will be held at the factory building on Jane street, at 8:15 Saturday evening, August 15.

The Wrong Man.

Chief Wood received word from Sheriff Mackey of Catskill on Wednesday afternoon that an Italian suspected of being the man who shot a woman at Coxsackie on Tuesday was on a train due in this city about 7 o'clock. Policeman Shader went through the train and found a man answering the description, an Italian about five feet ten inches tall and wearing a red necktie. Sheriff Mackey was notified of the arrest and came to Kingston in an automobile about 9 o'clock Wednesday night. Although the description was a good one Mackey was satisfied that the prisoner was not the right party and he was discharged from custody.

Assaulted His Mother.

Thomas Owens was arrested on Wednesday by Policeman Reardon on a warrant sworn out by his mother, who lives on Hanratty street, charging Thomas with assault in the third degree. The defendant was found guilty and was sent to jail for six months by Recorder Grogan.

INSANE MAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Elmore Cole, aged about 35 years, while demented, attempted suicide on Wednesday evening at his home on Derrenbacher street by inhaling illuminating gas. Previous to doing this he had saturated his hair and clothing, even filling his pockets with kerosene. It is thought he went to the cellar after doing this and then pulled out a plug in the inch gas main and went into an adjoining room to await death. The belief is that he intended igniting his clothing in a desperate attempt to end his life.

Some neighbor heard a scream and thinking there was something wrong looked out the window at the time, about 11 o'clock. She saw a light in the cellar of the house where Cole lived and suspecting something was wrong notified police headquarters. Policeman Healey and Ambulance Driver Simon Wood went to the house and found it filled with gas. With the aid of an electric search light they went through the rooms and found Cole unconscious. Going into the cellar they had difficulty in making their way on account of the strong flow of gas but succeeded in reaching the pipe and shutting it off.

Cole was revived after some fresh air had been secured by opening the windows and he was taken to the city hall where an attendant was placed in charge of him. Dr. Daniel Connelly was in attendance and thought it might not be a bad idea to have Cole examined as to his sanity. This morning Dr. Connelly and Dr. L. K. Stelle made an examination and concuded the man was insane. He will probably be committed to the Middletown state hospital. Cole has been employed on the West Shore railroad as a "car knocker," inspecting axles and wheels on incoming trains, and it is thought he procured the kerosene from a torch used in that work.

BATTLE OF HAELEN FOUGHT TUESDAY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Brussels, Aug. 13.—The first engagement of the gigantic conflict that has begun on Belgian soil will be known in history as the Battle of Haelen, having centered in and about that little town of Limburg province. Here are the first details of the battle that have been received:

The battle began at dawn on Tuesday and raged until darkness fell. Even after sunset there was desultory artillery fire and many shells fell upon the road between Haelen and Diest, which lies four miles to the north on the river Herck.

Haelen was the center of the conflict with the two angles at Diest and Zeelheim.

Under the blazing August sun, throughout the entire day, the incessant artillery and rifle fire was kept up.

Once the left wing of the Belgian army wavered and reinforcements were asked for. The public firemen in Diest begged to be allowed to accompany the troops which went out to support this flank of King Albert's forces.

Soldiers on both sides fought with marked gallantry on the firing line, but, according to the dispatches from the scene, the Germans lost more heavily than the Belgians.

By 7 p. m. the ground between Haelen, Diest and Zeelheim was cleared of Germans, but it was littered with dead and wounded, broken artillery, the carcasses of horses and cast off arms and knapsacks.

More than 200 dead German soldiers were counted within the space of 50 yards.

During the heat of conflict three Belgian soldiers, who had been wounded, crawled to two nearby bridges over the Demer and blew them up.

The shells which fell in Haelen partly demolished the town and set fire to a restaurant, a church and several houses, all of which were burned.

The Germans numbered between 5,000 and 6,000, being opposed by a Belgian force made up of lancers, mounted riflemen, carabineers and artillery. When the Germans fell back they left a big quantity of booty, which was captured by the Belgians and heaped outside the precincts of Haelen. The Belgians also captured a large number of fine cavalry horses which had been used by the Uhlans.

FISHER IS ACTIVE.

Will Remodel Old Carriage Company Building at Early Date.

Lew Fischer, who recently purchased the Kingston Carriage Company's building on Broadway, is making plans to have the building remodeled so as to be used as a skating rink on the ground floor and as a dance hall and public exhibition hall on the second floor. A mezzanine floor will be built in for an orchestra so that in case both floors are in use at the same time the orchestra can be readily heard in both floors. The upper floor will be let out for amusements and Mr. Fischer expects to be ready for occupancy by the middle of September when engagements will be booked by him. The final plans for the new theater which he contemplates erecting of the vacant lot above the present building have not been completed but as a considerable sum will be expended the theater promises to be a very valuable acquisition to the real estate in that vicinity.

Transfer at West Shore

A new cross over is being laid by the West Shore railroad at the Broadway crossing and passengers were forced to transfer from either side of the crossing this morning.

Making Use of Smoke.

A novel method of getting rid of black smoke and at the same time turning it to practical use is now being adopted in some Belgian factories. The smoke is driven by fans into a porous receptacle over which flows a stream of petroleum or similar liquid. The smoke is thus caught and turned into a gas that gives great heat, and can be used for running gas engines.

BELGIANS CLAIM GERMAN DEFEAT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Brussels, Aug. 13.—The Belgian war office announced today that the German troops marching on Namur had been defeated "with very heavy losses" at Eghezee by Belgian troops and are now retreating.

In the conflict at Eghezee the Belgian forces were materially aided by machine guns mounted on automobiles. These could be moved about rapidly on the plain in which Eghezee is located.

After announcing the victory at Eghezee, the war office issued this statement:

"No further surprises will disturb the Belgians. Any further attacks will be victoriously repulsed by the Belgians, who have completely dispersed the belief of the invincibility of the German troops."

Eghezee lies about ten miles north of Namur and about 25 miles south of Hasslet, near which the battle of Haelen was fought.

Skeptical Judge.

A Jew in the Shoreditch (Eng.) County court expressed the hope that his hands might drop off if he was not speaking the truth. "They won't," said Judge Cluer. "You managed to record for us that such things did happen, but the earth won't open now and swallow us up. I have heard men express the wish to drop dead if they were not telling the truth, but it never happens. We can never settle cases in that way."

Trees 700 Years Old.

Observations and records as to the general age of trees have shown that the pine tree attains 700 years as a maximum length of life; 425 years is regarded as the allotted span of the silver fir; the larch lives, as a rule, about 275 years; the red beech, 245; the aspen, 210; the birch, 200; the ash, 170; the elder, 145; the elm, 130.

FLORAL PARADE DAY AT THE COUNTY FAIR

Brilliant Display Attracted and Delighted a Crowd of 15,000 at Ellenville Fair on Wednesday.

Wednesday was an ideal day for the Ellenville Fair, with the dust well laid by the previous night's rain, the temperature much cooler, a sky just cloudy enough to make a day in the open comfortable, and a program to more than delight and entertain all, not to mention the fine exhibits. Floral parade day is always one of the big days at the fair, and it certainly was this year. The crowds which went to Ellenville by special train, by regular train, by autos and carriages, found plenty in the exhibits and the "midway" to entertain them while waiting for the parade which took place early in the afternoon.

Looking over the crowds, before entering the main exhibition building, one could not but take note of the change in fashions of the county fairs of today as compared with those of our grandparents' time. What would they have thought of the "midway," of today, with its minature ferris wheel, its merry-go-rounds of different sorts and its many devices, clever and humorous for separating the fair-goer from his hard earned money? Still more, what would they have thought of the long procession of automobiles, the majority of them belonging to our farmers who with "nopushie and no pullee" brought their whole families spinning onto the grounds. Our grandmothers would surely have felt out of place in an exhibit where exquisite modern embroidery was the main woman's contribution, with home-made cakes and preserves decidedly second in interest. In fact the one article to be seen having the real flavor of the old-time county fair, was the pieced and hand-quilted bed-quilts. There were several such, some of quite elaborate pattern, which the visitor had more than a suspicion were the hand-work of earlier days.

Fine Needlework Exhibit.

One thing was sure, the needlework exhibit was remarkable as to the large number of articles shown, their variety and fineness of workmanship. This collection looked like a mammoth "woman's exchange." There were elaborate and handsome table covers, hand-embroidered; exquisite centerpieces of every sort of needlework, including hand made lace work; embroidered gowns, childrens' dresses, and the daintiest and finest of embroidered shirt waists. Then there were all sorts of artistic couch pillows, counterpanes of various kinds, woven rugs, etc., almost without number. Certainly the needle women of Ulster county may well be proud of their work.

and Canned Fruit.

Garden

The Ulster Garden club would have complimented Ulster gardeners on the display of home-raised flowers of every sort. That old fashioned gardens are much in vogue was plainly to be seen by the number of fine specimens of asters, zinnias, hollyhocks, phlox, nasturtiums, gladioli, and many similar blooms. Then the collection of canned fruits was particularly appetizing, while the cakes, many of them rich fruit cakes made one's mouth water. So much for the articles essentially feminine in their production.

Art Exhibit.

The art exhibit was a place of much interest, there being many fine water color pieces, studies in oil, hand-painted china, and scenic photographs. Amongst the oil paintings was one especially good copy of the head of an old tar with a lighted pipe in his mouth. So strong and lifelike was the face that the eyes hold the gaze of the onlooker with an almost living magnetism. The art exhibit also included several antiques and curios that were well worth examining.

School Exhibit.

One of the most interesting and excellent exhibits was that made by the school children of the Ellenville schools. Beginning with excellent kindergarten work, the drawings, the water-colorings, the relief and colored maps, the illustrated essays, etc., were numerous and all of a remarkably high order.

Then the vegetable and live stock displays came in for their full share of enthusiastic patronage and praise, the collection of "bunnies," proving particularly attractive to the little folks.

Good Chicken Dinner.

Dinner was served in a large tent next to the main building and a very good chicken dinner it was, too, and well served. Having looked, and looked, throughout the forenoon, it was a relief to tired eyes and brain to sit at one of the tables in this refreshment tent and look across to Mount Meenahga rising green for the most part, with some scars of bared rock directly before one. Certainly, as far as scenic beauty is concerned, the grounds of the Ellenville fair are remarkably picturesque.

Trained Animals.

The real excitement of the day came directly after the noon hour, when the people began to come in steady streams to witness the great floral parade for which the Ellenville fair has been for years so deservedly famous. The grandstands were early filled with spectators, and one of the best attractions of the fair, that of trained animals and trapeze performers kept the people so entertained that no one realized that the parade was late in starting. In this trained animal show were seen some unusual animals. Two South African black bears, not much bigger than Collie dogs did many clever stunts showing a wonderfully compact muscular anatomy and much intelligence. The dogs and monkeys were also very clever, the latter causing considerable excitement for a few moments. One of the monkeys, being either jealous of some rival performer, bored at having to wait his turn to win applause, or overcome with a fit of exploring curiosity, slipped away from the attendants, and before anyone realized what had happened scooted across the track and made for the grandstand. Those who saw the rapid approach of Mr. Monkey, began to look exceeding anxious, but the runaway made no attempt to go up among the spectators speedily clambering onto the supporting woodwork where he scolded vigorously. When the attendant caught him, he could not resist giving his monkeyship a good shaking, which was resented with much more scolding and jabbering on the part of the captured animal. The episode, by no means on program, delighted the people greatly. No report of this show would be complete without mentioning the really handsome big bear, and the trained raccoon. The trained animal exhibit was followed by a splendid trapeze performance given by two men and a woman. In the meantime, the floats and decorated vehicles were arriving on the grounds and the entrance to the grounds was almost congested with the coming crowds. One thing is certain, no accident can befall the attendants at the Ellenville fair, as far as the management is concerned. The closest watch was kept of entering and leaving autos and horse-driven vehicles and with every one the pedestrians were warned of their approach, and given ample time to get out of their way.

Yama Inn Coach.

Just before the parade began to form, there came dashing into the grounds, the coach and four from Yama Inn, and a brave spectacle it was. The handsome old coach, and it is a real old-timer, was drawn by four spirited dappled greys and brought to the fair a party from Yama Inn.

The Floral Parade.

The floral parade besides being one of the most attractive events of the entire fair each year, is also, decidedly the social event.

Neither time, patience, artistic skill, ingenuity nor means are spared by the people of Ellenville and the immediate nearby towns, to make the floral parade a truly beautiful spectacle. Two thousand dollars was offered this year in purses and prizes while a special prize of a handsome cut glass pitcher and tumbler and tray was presented to the auto and the horse-draw vehicle being the most beautifully decorated. The judges, who certainly had a most difficult task to perform where each entry was so attractive, were Mrs. Walter St. John Benedict of New York who has a summer home at Cragsmoor, Mrs. Henry Horton of New York who has a summer home in Ellenville and David Burgevin of this city. The committees having the entire parade in charge were as follows: Floral committee: Frank J. Potter, chairman; George J. Hoornbeck, M. E. Clark, J. A. Tice, Dr. W. E. Woodend, Alfred Haskell, George B. Holmes, and H. Westlake Coons, who took charge of the entries. The ladies' committee included, Mrs. Justin U. Schoonmaker, chairman; Mrs. W. L. Steiner, Miss Carrie Clark, Miss Flossie Gaskell, Miss May Van Deusen, Miss Harriet Bradford, Mrs. C. H. Van Kirk, Mrs. E. J. Bailey, Jr. The automobile committee was made up as follows: Dr. L. E. Vernon, chairman; George Edsell, B. C. West, L. N. Edsell and Moses Green.

So much originality was displayed by the owners of the many vehicles that in only a few cases were there any number of equipages in the same class to be judged. The automobiles led the procession, which presented a panorama of bewildering beauty as the autos, the floats and the carriages passed the grand stands and the judges' stand.

An exceedingly pretty little two-passenger auto headed the parade. This was decorated in a soft shade of lemon yellow with wisteria blossoms and butterflies, and carried two young ladies charmingly gowned in the same effective colors as decorated the car. A blue ribbon was awarded Miss Dorothy Vernon the driver of the car.

There were several entries in the class of five-passenger autos. To the Village Improvement Society and Louis Edsell went the blue ribbons. The Village Improvement Society auto was completely covered with a soft white material, festooned with dainty pink, blue and yellow flowers and leaves, the festoons ending in long, floating bows and streamers of the same delicate shades. The occupants, five charming young ladies were very prettily gowned in the palest shades of pink, blue, green, yellow and lavender, respectively and wore becoming little hats of the same color. The whole effect was that of a piece of Dresden china.

The motor car of Louis Edsell, which also won a blue ribbon, was all in white, with pendant wisteria blossoms, interspersed with tiny Japanese lanterns, and its passengers were all clad in white, presenting a remarkable pretty picture.

Those winning second prizes in the class were Miss Mary E. Coons and Walter H. White, whose car was all in white with green leaves and touches of green, and carrying four young girls dressed in white with green sashes and ribbons on their hats. Mr. White driving the car, was deliciously cool looking. One of the little girls, with reins of green, drive a rampant white poodle who posed on the hood of the car. Miss Coons's car was gaily decorated with great, handsome pointettias, backed with green foliage and which carried a party of little girls, also wearing the poinsettias effective against white gowns and hats. L. L. Weigandt, with a car all white and spotless, carrying four white-capped, white-uniformed nurses, and with bottles of "pure food milk," as further decorations, won a third prize as did the car of Louis Spadaro, which was decorated with sun flowers, poppies snowballs and green leaves. In a class by itself, though carrying five passengers was the auto of Mrs. R. L. Moffitt, beautifully decorated in the national colors. The floral part of the decoration was made up of poinsettias, while a beauty of a silk, American flag was draped at one side, the folds being caught up gracefully with a poinsettia; two smaller flags fluttering from the front of the car, while red, white and blue ribbons were also used effectively as holding the flowers in place. The ladies who occupied the car, were gowned in white and wore white hats with small American flags as upright trimming, while the driver of the car in a white duck suit had a band of red, white and blue ribbon around his hat. This car won a blue ribbon readily.

There were two, open passenger [illegible] Alda, have returned home from a seven passenger [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brady and [illegible] home on Monday after a pleasant [illegible] autos entered. Miss Harriet Bradford, who drove her own car, which was elaborately decorated with crimson poppies, yellow chrysanthemums and green foliage, and whose occupants wore white with red ribbons, won the first prize. That of A. V. Nordland, won the second prize. This was decorated in black and yellow over a white ground, the flowers being black-eyed Susans. Pretty white bells hung from arches of the black and yellow trimmings.

There were also two auto floats, both unique and attractive. Probably because of its appropriateness and completeness as to detail, the battleship float of Moses E. Green of Kerhonkson was the most conspicuous vehicle in the parade as it was the best decorated auto. It won a first prize and the special prize of the cut glass set. Sailing silently along, with dignity, and propelled by an unseen hand, the ship with its hull of dull green and its deck of white presented an imposing sight. It was the "America," and American Beauty roses hung from the deck, while its emblem, a shield like our flag showed on both bow and stern. The black smoke stacks, and guns, and life-saving boats were all perfectly reproduced. Over the vessel floated the long line of signal flags of every color. Of course, "The America" won a blue ribbon, and even when presented with the special prize, it was a difficult matter to persuade Mr. Green to emerge from the secrecy of his war-like craft to receive the same, amidst the enthusiastic applause of the crowds.

The other auto float, resembling a large fancy basket of white with handles of pink and festoons of dainty pink cherry blossoms, carried five passengers dressed in white with pink ribbons and flowers. A tiny white horse on the front of the car was driven with pink and white reins by a young girl in the car, which won a blue ribbon.

It was a far cry from the auto part of the parade to the first part of the other section, which was headed by a one-seated vehicle, drawn by an ox, yet while not so speedy as its predecessors, it had possibilities of outdistancing them since there was no danger of bursting tires, or exasperating machinery. This equipage was quite pastoral in character. The vehicle was decorated in pale yellow, with white lilies and green leaves, and lilies adorned the unusually long horns of the ox as well as the yellow parasol carried by the two young ladies. To Miss Anna Lapolt of Summitville, the driver, was awarded a first prize.

Next came a float of G. A. R. men of Ward Post, No. 191, which was realistic, impressive, pathetic and artistic. In addition to the decorations of the national colors, gun carriages were mounted on the float where the G. A. R. men rode, and Old Glory floated to the breeze. This float was drawn by four horses. When awarded a first prize the old soldiers sent up a rousing cheer for the judges and the fair.

Alone in her glory, Miss Bernice Gaskell won the blue ribbon as driving the only pony cart which was exceedingly pretty in its decorations of white and cerese with flowers of the same colors.

There were five entries for one seat vehicles driven by one horse and prizes were awarded as follows:

A runabout all covered in light chrysanthemums, ladies riding, gowned in the same shades of green and pink and carrying a green parasol with pink chrysanthemums, blue ribbon to Miss Alice Sheeley; second prizes to Mrs. McNally, driving a canopy topped vehicle all covered with feathery asparagus and golden glow and Miss Mary Smith, whose carriage was decorated with fine green foliage and real white asters. Miss Florence McDowell, whose canopy topped carriage was completely encased in crimson, even the harness being crimson, and Miss Ednah Enyder, whose buggy was covered with white and decorated with asparagus green and pink chrysanthemums, won third prizes.

The only two seated vehicle driven by one horse was artistically decorated with autumn leaves and a blue ribbon for the same was given to Miss Helen Gaskell.

The floats which followed won compliments galore all along the line.

The only boarding house float was that of the Marshall House, and it was exceedingly effective in its trimmings of white and old blue. Within the arbor like decorations was arranged an attractively appointed and well laden dinner table, around which were grouped the guests in dainty attire, all having a right merry time. Mrs. Bert Marshall won a blue ribbon for this float.

Three business floats came next in the procession.

The George B. Holmes float carried a large, perfectly white "La France" shoe, and the floral decorations were appropriately those of a La France roses. This won a blue ribbon. The Ellenville banks made a remarkably fine showing. The float represented the entrance to a white marble building. Golden chrysanthemums, tall and stately, were the flowers. Overhead in gilt letters and figures on the white background was the legend, "Ellenville Banks, $2,500,000 Deposits," while underneath one read, "Ellenville Banks, surplus, $232,000." Bags of money, supposedly, stood on the floor of the float, which carried off a blue ribbon.

The Armour Company had a clever float in honor of the "Light house Cleanser," in which a realistic light-house was well presented. This received a blue ribbon.

Each of the Ellenville musical organizations won a blue ribbon. The float of the Ellenville Martial Corps, carried a huge red and white drum with the society's title in gilt letters. About this were grouped young ladies in white wearing poinsettias and carrying red parasols. The drum corps itself wore an exceedingly effective uniform or red and white with the cloak lining of blue satin thrown over the shoulder giving the national colors. The float of the Clayton Band was of white with pillars of white decorated with morning glories. A young lady in white was seated before a beautiful gilt harp and trumpets of gilt appeared in the decorations.

Then came several society floats.

The C. E. Society of the Reformed Church was prettily grouped within a lattice-like float, whose chief decorations were daisies and butterflies. The girls, seated in pretty green willow chairs were attractively gowned in white while one of them carried a butterfly net. A blue ribbon went to them.

The Queens' Daughters of St. Mary's Church were artistically [illegible] their horses [illegible] bearing in gilt letters the society monogram. The young ladies were gowned in white and wore gilt crowns. A blue ribbon was awarded them. The G. A. R. Bells of the Methodist Church, had a white float with orchid decorations, and a large white bell was swung by one of the girls all of whom wore white with touches of orchid color. They also won a blue ribbon.

Two agricultural floats were very attractive and as different as possible. One represented a "Spotless Town," farm scene in its whiteness, with farm fruits of every sort and farm creatures, both feathered fowl and domestic animals. The other was a fine representation of "Old King Cole and his fiddlers, three." The jolly old king sat on his throne while his gaily clad fiddlers played merrily before him. Blue ribbons went to each of these floats.

The Eastern Star float was very picturesque with its large star forming the background to the throne upon which sat the queen with her lily scepter. Eastern lilies formed the chief decoration. This won a blue ribbon.

To the Ellenville Improvement Society went not only a first prize, but the special prize of the cut glass set for the most beautifully decorated horse-drawn vehicle. A charming maiden rode on a great white sea dragon whose open jaws carried fright to all that should hinder the progress of Ellenville. Lotus flowers formed the floral part of the decoration. The whole effect was really classic.

The Daughters of Pocahontas had another very effective float, with a canoe bearing an Indian maiden, surrounded with cat tails, rushes, water grass and flowers, and which was in charge of a dignified Indian squaw. This received a blue ribbon.

The parade was concluded with a group of blooded horses, with trappings and decorations of green and white from Dr. Woodend's estate. These horses were led by grooms and were followed by a cart lavishly decorated with snowballs and their leaves, and drawn by six pretty ponies with green and white ribbons, also a part of Dr. Woodend's entry. Best of all came Dr. Woodend with his coach and four, with Mrs. Woodend, gowned in green satin with touches of white, on the box beside him. The coach also of a rich green with green and white flowers carried out the picture completely. Dr. Woodend was kept busy handling the ribbons that managed his spirited blooded horses, but turned them over to his green-clad footmen long enough to graciously accept the elegant green and gold rosette badge prepared especially for him in token of his appreciated assistance to the fair committees.

The floral parade was followed by one of the most amusing features of the entire fair, the hitching contests.

Four men contested for the men's prize and two women for the women's prize.

The horses and carriages of whatever sort, were drawn up in line, and every bit of harness was taken from the horses and placed in the vehicles. Then the horse was tied to a wheel of the vehicle. When the word of the starter was given each man or woman harnessed his horse, again to the vehicle, drove around the half mile track, stopped at the starting point, unharnessed and again tied to the wheel of the vehicle. The four men who entered the contest showed all degrees of speed from the deliberate and sure haste of the winner to the nervous clumsiness of the loser in fingering the intricacies of the harness. Then off went the drivers and horses, any gate of the latter being allowed. Charles Cudney, who evidently enjoyed every moment of the contest, was the easy winner of the first prize. Gipsy John, with his pony cart, came second, Chester Cudney, though somewhat slow in starting, came in third and Harry Rundle with a pony and runabout won the fourth prize. The contest covered 4 minutes and 20 seconds of time and $25 was distributed among the winners.

Mrs. Carrie Snyder of Lackawack and Mrs. Clara Moffitt of Wurtsboro were the women who contested for a similar prize, and no feminine nervousness marred their movements. While Mrs. Moffitt's horse turned sharp around as she started to drive around the half-mile track, thereby losing several seconds she came in so close a second to Mrs. Snyder as to make the contest almost a tie. However, Mrs. Snyder won the first prize in 4 minutes and 30 seconds.

Highland Audience Delighted.

William F. Kelly's summer concert company and minstrel show, which gave an entertainment at Highland Wedensday evening, met with great success. Long before the show began the hall was filled and standing room was at a premium. The act, "Fun in a School Room," which has scored such a hit in every place where the company has showed, delighted the Highland people. The troupe made the journey to Highland in the large automobile stage.

Take One Guess.

Susie's grandmother had been scolding her. Susie felt indignant, but had been taught never to "answer back." However, she got even. Taking her kitten in her arms, she thus soliloquized: "Kitty, I wish one of us was dead this minute. Not you kitty, nor me, kitty, but one of us three in this room."

ADOGRAM No. 11

The man who is always cheerfully willing to "make good" seldom has to.

The merchant who has built up the reputation of his establishment through advertising is usually eager to refund the money if the purchase is not satisfactory. There is security to the purchaser in dealing with the men who advertise.

But merchants of this kind are seldom called upon to do any refunding—because they watch closely goods and service.

Amongst the oil paintings was one especially good copy of the head of an old tar with a lighted pipe in his mouth. So strong and lifelike was the face that the eyes hold the gaze of the onlooker with an almost living magnetism. The art exhibit also included several antiques and curios that were well worth examining.

School Exhibit.

One of the most interesting and excellent exhibits was that made by the school children of the Ellenville schools. Beginning with excellent kindergarten work, the drawings, the water-colorings, the relief and colored maps, the illustrated essays, etc., were numerous and all of a remarkably high order.

Then the vegetable and live stock displays came in for their full share of enthusiastic patronage and praise, the collection of "bunnies," proving particularly attractive to the little folks.

Good Chicken Dinner.

Dinner was served in a large tent next to the main building and a very good chicken dinner it was, too, and well served. Having looked, and looked, throughout the forenoon, it was a relief to tired eyes and brain to sit at one of the tables in this refreshment tent and look across to Mount Meenahga rising green for the most part, with some scars of bared rock directly before one. Certainly, as far as scenic beauty is concerned, the grounds of the Ellenville fair are remarkably picturesque.

Trained Animals.

The real excitement of the day came directly after the noon hour, when the people began to come in steady streams to witness the great floral parade for which the Ellenville fair has been for years so deservedly famous. The grandstands were early filled with spectators, and one of the best attractions of the fair, that of trained animals and trapeze performers kept the people so entertained that no one realized that the parade was late in starting. In this trained animal show were seen some unusual animals. Two South African black bears, not much bigger than Collie dogs did many clever stunts showing a wonderfully compact muscular anatomy and much intelligence. The dogs and monkeys were also very clever, the latter causing considerable excitement for a few moments. One of the monkeys, being either jealous of some rival performer, bored at having to wait his turn to win applause, or overcome with a fit of exploring curiosity, slipped away from the attendants, and before anyone realized what had happened scooted across the track and made for the grandstand. Those who saw the rapid approach of Mr. Monkey, began to look exceeding anxious, but the runaway made no attempt to go up among the spectators speedily clambering onto the supporting woodwork where he scolded vigorously. When the attendant caught him, he could not resist giving his monkeyship a good shaking, which was resented with much more scolding and jabbering on the part of the captured animal. The episode, by no means on program, delighted the people greatly. No report of this show would be complete without mentioning the really handsome big bear, and the trained raccoon. The trained animal exhibit was followed by a splendid trapeze performance given by two men and a woman. In the meantime, the floats and decorated vehicles were arriving on the grounds and the entrance to the grounds was almost congested with the coming crowds. One thing is certain, no accident can befall the attendants at the Ellenville fair, as far as the management is concerned. The closest watch was kept of entering and leaving autos and horse-driven vehicles and with every one the pedestrians were warned of their approach, and given ample time to get out of their way.

Yama Inn Coach.

Just before the parade began to form, there came dashing into the grounds, the coach and four from Yama Inn, and a brave spectacle it was. The handsome old coach, and it is a real old-timer, was drawn by four spirited dappled greys and brought to the fair a party from Yama Inn.

The Floral Parade.

The floral parade besides being one of the most attractive events of the entire fair each year, is also, decidedly the social event.

Neither time, patience, artistic skill, ingenuity nor means are spared by the people of Ellenville and the immediate nearby towns, to make the floral parade a truly beautiful spectacle. Two thousand dollars was offered this year in purses and prizes while a special prize of a handsome cut glass pitcher and tumbler and tray was presented to the auto and the horse-draw vehicle being the most beautifully decorated. The judges, who certainly had a most difficult task to perform where each entry was so attractive, were Mrs. Walter St. John Benedict of New York who has a summer home at Cragsmoor, Mrs. Henry Horton of New York who has a summer home in Ellenville and David Burgevin of this city. The committees having the entire parade in charge were as follows: Floral committee: Frank J. Potter, chairman; George J. Hoornbeck, M. E. Clark, J. A. Tice, Dr. W. E. Woodend, Alfred Haskell, George B. Holmes, and H. Westlake Coons, who took charge of the entries. The ladies' committee included, Mrs. Justin U. Schoonmaker, chairman; Mrs. W. L. Steiner, Miss Carrie Clark, Miss Flossie Gaskell, Miss May Van Deusen, Miss Harriet Bradford, Mrs. C. H. Van Kirk, Mrs. E. J. Bailey, Jr. The automobile committee was made up as follows: Dr. L. E. Vernon, chairman; George Edsell, B. C. West, L. N. Edsell and Moses Green.

So much originality was displayed that in only a few cases were there any number of equipages in the same class to be judged. The automobiles led the procession, which presented a panorama of bewildering beauty as the autos, the floats and the carriages passed the grand stands and the judges' stand.

An exceedingly pretty little two-passenger auto headed the parade. This was decorated in a soft shade of lemon yellow with wisteria blossoms and butterflies, and carried two young ladies charmingly gowned in the same effective colors as decorated the car. A blue ribbon was awarded Miss Dorothy Vernon the driver of the car.

There were several entries in the class of five-passenger autos. To the Village Improvement Society and Louis Edsell went the blue ribbons. The Village Improvement Society auto was completely covered with a soft white material, festooned with dainty pink, blue and yellow flowers and leaves, the festoons ending in long, floating bows and streamers of the same delicate shades. The occupants, five charming young ladies were very prettily gowned in the palest shades of pink, blue, green, yellow and lavender, respectively and wore becoming little hats of the same color. The whole effect was that of a piece of Dresden china.

The motor car of Louis Edsell, which also won a blue ribbon, was all in white, with pendant wisteria blossoms, interspersed with tiny Japanese lanterns, and its passengers were all clad in white, presenting a remarkable pretty picture.

Those winning second prizes in the class were Miss Mary E. Coons and Walter H. White, whose car was all in white with green leaves and touches of green, and carrying four young girls dressed in white with green sashes and ribbons on their hats, Mr. White driving the car, was deliciously cool looking. One of the little girls, with reins of green, drive a rampant white poodle who posed on the hood of the car. Miss Coons's car was gaily decorated with great, handsome pointettias, backed with green foliage and which carried a party of little girls, also wearing the poinsettias effective against white gowns and hats. L. L. Weigandt, with a car all white and spotless, carrying four white-capped, white-uniformed nurses, and with bottles of "pure food milk," as further decorations, won a third prize as did the car of Louis Spadaro, which was decorated with sun flowers, poppies snowballs and green leaves. In a class by itself, though carrying five passengers was the auto of Mrs. R. L. Moffitt, beautifully decorated in the national colors. The floral part of the decoration was made up of poinsettias, while a beauty of a silk, American flag was draped at one side, the folds being caught up gracefully with a poinsettia; two smaller flags fluttering from the front of the car, while red, white and blue ribbons were also used effectively as holding the flowers in place. The ladies who occupied the car, were gowned in white and wore white hats with small American flags as upright trimming, while the driver of the car in a white duck suit had a band of red, white and blue ribbon around his hat. This car won a blue ribbon readily.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Darby and [illegible] by the owners of the many vehicles that in only a few cases were there any number of equipages in the same class to be judged. The automobiles led the procession, which presented a panorama of bewildering beauty as the autos, the floats and the carriages passed the grand stands and the judges' stand.

This car won a blue ribbon readily.

There were two, [illegible] Alda, have returned home from a [illegible] autos entered, Miss Harriet Bradford, who drove her own car, which was elaborately decorated with crimson poppies, yellow chrysanthemums and green foliage, and whose occupants wore white with red ribbons, won the first prize. That of A. V. Nordland, won the second prize. This was decorated in black and yellow over a white ground, the flowers being black-eyed Susans. Pretty white bells hung from arches of the black and yellow trimmings.

There were also two auto floats, both unique and attractive. Probably because of its appropriateness and completeness as to detail, the battleship float of Moses E. Green of Kerhonkson was the most conspicuous vehicle in the parade as it was the best decorated auto. It won a first prize and the special prize of the cut glass set. Sailing silently along, with dignity, and propelled by an unseen hand, the ship with its hull of dull green and its deck of white presented an imposing sight. It was the "America," and American Beauty roses hung from the deck, while its emblem, a shield like our flag showed on both bow and stern. The black smoke stacks, and guns, and life-saving boats were all perfectly reproduced. Over the vessel floated the long line of signal flags of every color. Of course, "The America" won a blue ribbon, and even when presented with the special prize, it was a difficult matter to persuade Mr. Green to emerge from the secrecy of his war-like craft to receive the same, amidst the enthusiastic applause of the crowds.

The other auto float, resembling a large fancy basket of white with handles of pink and festoons of dainty pink cherry blossoms, carried five passengers dressed in white with pink ribbons and flowers. A tiny white horse on the front of the car was driven with pink and white reins by a young girl in the car, which won a blue ribbon.

It was a far cry from the auto part of the parade to the first part of the other section, which was headed by a one-seated vehicle, drawn by an ox, yet while not so speedy as its predecessors, it had possibilities of outdistancing them since there was no danger of bursting tires, or exasperating machinery. This equipage was quite pastoral in character. The vehicle was decorated in pale yellow, with white lilies and green leaves, and lilies adorned the unusually long horns of the ox as well as the yellow parasol carried by the two young ladies. To Miss Anna Lapolt of Summitville, the driver, was awarded a first prize.

Next came a float of G. A. R. men of Ward Post, No. 191, which was realistic, impressive, pathetic and artistic. In addition to the decorations of the national colors, gun carriages were mounted on the float where the G. A. R. men rode, and Old Glory floated to the breeze. This float was drawn by four horses. When awarded a first prize the old soldiers sent up a rousing cheer for the judges and the fair.

Alone in her glory, Miss Bernice Gaskell won the blue ribbon as driving the only pony cart which was exceedingly pretty in its decorations of white and cerese with flowers of the same colors.

There were five entries for one seat vehicles driven by one horse and prizes were awarded as follows:

A runabout all covered in light [illegible] on Monday after a pleasant [illegible] chrysanthemums, ladies riding, gowned in the same shades of green and pink and carrying a green parasol with pink chrysanthemums, blue ribbon to Miss Alice Sheeley; second prizes to Mrs. McNally, driving a canopy topped vehicle all covered with feathery asparagus and golden glow and Miss Mary Smith, whose carriage was decorated with fine green foliage and real white asters. Miss Florence McDowell, whose canopy topped carriage was completely encased in crimson, even the harness being crimson, and Miss Ednah Enyder, whose buggy was covered with white and decorated with asparagus green and pink chrysanthemums, won third prizes.

The only two seated vehicle driven by one horse was artistically decorated with autumn leaves and a blue ribbon for the same was given to Miss Helen Gaskell.

The floats which followed won compliments galore all along the line.

The only boarding house float was that of the Marshall House, and it was exceedingly effective in its trimmings of white and old blue. Within the arbor like decorations was arranged an attractively appointed and well laden dinner table, around which were grouped the guests in dainty attire, all having a right merry time. Mrs. Bert Marshall won a blue ribbon for this float.

Three business floats came next in the procession.

The George B. Holmes float carried a large, perfectly white "La France" shoe, and the floral decorations were appropriately those of a La France roses. This won a blue ribbon. The Ellenville banks made a remarkably fine showing. The float represented the entrance to a white marble building. Golden chrysanthemums, tall and stately, were the flowers. Overhead in gilt letters and figures on the white background was the legend, "Ellenville Banks, $2,500,000 Deposits," while underneath one read, "Ellenville Banks, surplus, $232,000." Bags of money, supposedly, stood on the floor of the float, which carried off a blue ribbon.

The Armour Company had a clever float in honor of the "Light house Cleanser," in which a realistic light-house was well presented. This received a blue ribbon.

Each of the Ellenville musical organizations won a blue ribbon. The float of the Ellenville Martial Corps, carried a huge red and white drum with the society's title in gilt letters. About this were grouped young ladies in white wearing poinsettias and carrying red parasols. The drum corps itself wore an exceedingly effective uniform or red and white with the cloak lining of blue satin thrown over the shoulder giving the national colors. The float of the Clayton Band was of white with pillars of white decorated with morning glories. A young lady in white was seated before a beautiful gilt harp and trumpets of gilt appeared in the decorations.

Then came several society floats.

The C. E. Society of the Reformed Church was prettily grouped within a lattice-like float, whose chief decorations were daisies and butterflies. The girls, seated in pretty green willow chairs were attractively gowned in white while one of them carried a butterfly net. A blue ribbon went to them.

The Queens' Daughters of St. Mary's Church were artistically [illegible] HUDSON, ROBERT FULTON | Union Sts., 9:38 a. m.; 2:13 [illegible] bearing in gilt letters the society monogram. The young ladies were gowned in white and wore gilt crowns. A blue ribbon was awarded them. The G. A. R. Bells of the Methodist Church, had a white float with orchid decorations, and a large white bell was swung by one of the girls all of whom wore white with touches of orchid color. They also won a blue ribbon.

Two agricultural floats were very attractive and as different as possible. One represented a "Spotless Town," farm scene in its whiteness, with farm fruits of every sort and farm creatures, both feathered fowl and domestic animals. The other was a fine representation of "Old King Cole and his fiddlers, three." The jolly old king sat on his throne while his gaily clad fiddlers played merrily before him. Blue ribbons went to each of these floats.

The Eastern Star float was very picturesque with its large star forming the background to the throne upon which sat the queen with her lily scepter. Eastern lilies formed the chief decoration. This won a blue ribbon.

To the Ellenville Improvement Society went not only a first prize, but the special prize of the cut glass set for the most beautifully decorated horse-drawn vehicle. A charming maiden rode on a great white sea dragon whose open jaws carried fright to all that should hinder the progress of Ellenville. Lotus flowers formed the floral part of the decoration. The whole effect was really classic.

The Daughters of Pocahontas had another very effective float, with a canoe bearing an Indian maiden, surrounded with cat tails, rushes, water grass and flowers, and which was in charge of a dignified Indian squaw. This received a blue ribbon.

The parade was concluded with a group of blooded horses, with trappings and decorations of green and white from Dr. Woodend's estate. These horses were led by grooms and were followed by a cart lavishly decorated with snowballs and their leaves, and drawn by six pretty ponies with green and white ribbons, also a part of Dr. Woodend's entry. Best of all came Dr. Woodend with his coach and four, with Mrs. Woodend, gowned in green satin with touches of white, on the box beside him. The coach also of a rich green with green and white flowers carried out the picture completely. Dr. Woodend was kept busy handling the ribbons that manged his spirited blooded horses, but turned them over to his green-clad footmen long enough to graciously accept the elegant green and gold rosette badge prepared especially for him in token of his appreciated assistance to the fair committees.

The floral parade was followed by one of the most amusing features of the entire fair, the hitching contests.

Four men contested for the men's prize and two women for the women's prize.

The horses and carriages of whatever sort, were drawn up in line, and every bit of harness was taken from the horses and placed in the vehicles. Then the horse was tied to a wheel of the vehicle. When the word of the starter was given each man or woman harnessed his horse, again to the vehicle, drove around the half mile track, stopped at the starting point, unharnessed and again tied to the wheel of the vehicle. The four men who entered the contest showed all degree of speed from the deliberate and sure haste of the winner to the nervous clumsiness of the loser in finding the intricacies of the harness. Then off went the drivers and horses, any gate of the latter being allowed. Charles Cudney, who evidently enjoyed every moment of the contest, was the easy winner of the first prize. Gipsy John, with his pony cart, came second, Chester Cudney, though somewhat slow in starting, came in third and Harry Rundle with a pony and runabout won the fourth prize. The contest covered 4 minutes and 20 seconds of time and $25 was distributed among the winners.

Mrs. Carrie Snyder of Lackawack and Mrs. Clara Moffitt of Wurtsboro were the women who contested for a similar prize, and no feminine nervousness marred their movements. While Mrs. Moffitt's horse turned sharp around as she started to drive around the half-mile track, thereby losing several seconds she came in so close a second to Mrs. Snyder as to make the contest almost a tie. However, Mrs. Snyder won the first prize in 4 minutes and 30 seconds.

Highland Audience Delighted.

William F. Kelly's summer concert company and minstrel show, which gave an entertainment at Highland Wedensday evening, met with great success. Long before the show began the hall was filled and standing room was at a premium. The act, "Fun in a School Room," which has scored such a hit in every place where the company has showed, delighted the Highland people. The troupe made the journey to Highland in the large automobile stage.

Take One Guess.

Susie's grandmother had been scolding her. Susie felt indignant, but had been taught never to "answer back." However, she got even. Taking her kitten in her arms, she thus soliloquized: "Kitty, I wish one of us was dead this minute. Not you kitty, nor me, kitty, but one of us three in this room."

CARBAJAL FLEES TO VERA CRUZ

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Mexico City, Aug. 13.—Accompanied by three members of his cabinet, Provisional President Carbajal, who succeeded General Huerta as executive of the turbulent republic, fled to Vera Cruz today to take protection under the U. S. flag.

President Carbajal was accompanied by Jose Marca Lujan, acting minister of Gobernacion; Eduardo Precial Castillo, acting minister of justice, and Antonio Escandon, acting minister of commerce and labor.

The final action of the cabinet was to adopt a resolution declaring that the provisional government headed by Senor Carbajal was at an end. In the meantime a special train had been ordered and the party of officials left the capital at 2 5 o'clock. The departure of the executive left the central government of the republic without a head.

So hurriedly were the plans of the flight made and executed that members of the families of some of the refugees were left behind. The cabinet was in session considering the report of the Carranza conference, which had been brought here by diplomatic representatives, when word was received that the newspaper correspondents who had gone to report the conference had been arrested by the Constitutionalists. President Carbajal at once ordered a special train and packed up a few personal belongings which he wished to take with him.

Neither the president nor any of his acting ministers took time to write out official resignations.

General Iturbide, military governor of the Federal district, is in constant communication with Carranza and is preparing for the entry of the Constitutionalists.

All the artillery in the city has been sent forward to General Velasco's Federal army, whose intentions are doubtful. They are on the outskirts of the city, only moving at night to mask their operations.

DIED.

BARRETT—In this city, Thursday, August 13, 1914, Judson Barrett, in his 50th year.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral from his late residence, 90 Ravine street, Saturday afternoon at 2 p. m. Interment Montrepose Cemetery.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Members of the "B. G. Club" spent the day at Legg's Mills, where all enjoyed bathing very much.

A regular monthly meeting of the Municipal League will be held at the Kingston City Library on Friday ewening.

C. E. Van Amburg of North Front street has just received a large consignment of farm machinery consisting of feed mills and buzz saws.

The tug Cordts is bound up the river with the Cornell tow from New York. The Baker went down the river this morning with the tow from Albany.

In order to make the bowling alleys more popular to the members the Y. M. C. A. has reduced the prices to 5 cents a game by the order of the physical department committee.

The Young Men's Brotherhood of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer enjoyed a moonlight sail to Poughkeepsie on the steamer E. B. Gardner on Wednesday evening. There was a good sized crowd on board and all thoroughly enjoyed the occasion.

LOCAL BASEBALL DOINGS.

Games Played or to be Played by the Home Teams.

The Young Cornells defeated the Red Stars at baseball by the score of 9 to 0.

The senior baseball team of the Y. M. C. A. will play the team representing the Lace Mills on the Athletic Field this afternoon at six o'clock. Both teams are fast and the game should be close and exciting.

This evening the Y. M. C. A. Seniors will play the Lace Mills a game of baseball at the Athletic Field. In spite of the poles that obstruct the diamond being erected for the Moose Carnival, the game is expected to be a lively one.

The fast Crescents will line up against the fast Warrior baseball club from Rosendale on Sunday at 2 p. m. on the bush lots. The Crescents traveled to Rosendale the Fourth of July and defeated them by a score of 9 to 6, but Rosendale say they will get revenge, so a good crowd is expected as both teams have been playing in big league style.

There is some talk of organizing a baseball league among the clerks in the uptown stores and the clerks in the local banks to play baseball on Friday afternoons. Such a league was organized several seasons ago and some good games were played. Practically all of the stores now close on Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock which would allow the clerks to have some time for baseball before supper. The clerks in the banks are getting together and organizing a team and it is expected that they will shortly challenge the Wall street clerks to deadly combat.

Miss Gertie Dimsey of Highland spent last Thursday with Miss Lizzie Stennis and attended the church fair here.

DEFECTIVE COMMITMENTS.

"Car Riding" not a Crime Known to the Statutes.

Charles Comfort, Thomas A. Stais, John Chopel and Thomas Doberts, the four boys who were arrested at Highland several days ago for stealing a ride on a Central New England train, were discharged by County Judge Jenkins this morning because the papers on which they had been committed to jail were defective. The complaint stated that hey had been convicted of "car riding" and that they had been "held for the county court."

The boys were brought before Judge Jenkins by Sheriff Doyle. Assistant District Attorney Traver, who appeared for the sheriff, said the commitment was defective and could not be remedied. Judge Jenkins explained to the boys that they were being released only because a mistake had been made in the papers, and he warned them against car-riding in the future.

Two of the boys were in knickerbockers, and the other two, although wearing long trousers, were apparently not much older. One of the older boys acted as spokesman for the party. He said they had come from Waterbury, Conn., where they lived, and had left there in search of work. They decided to go to Maybrook, on the chance of obtaining work there. All of the boys said they were over 16 years old, and one of them had been employed in a paper box factory, which had laid off most of its employes and was working on half time because of the business depression.

The boys had no dea of how they would get back to their homes, unless they walked and worked their way en route. Their parents did not know of their predicament, they said, although one boy had written to his mother to forward money which was due him at the factory where he had worked.

John Quinn, a hobo, who was arrested at the same time as the boys, was also discharged by Judge Jenkins because his commitment was likewise defective. After his discharge, Quinn lost no time in getting out of the court house.

Daniel Christiana of Cottekill is visiting at Oscar Coddington's.

Pistol Shots in South Rondout.

South Rondout was disturbed on Wednesday evening when a man and wife got into an altereation because the woman believed her husband was too attentive to another woman. The affray ended by the woman drawing a revolver from the folds of her skirt and firing four shots point blank at him. Not one took effect but the reports were sufficient to alarm the entire neighborhood. By the time the neighbors reached the scene peace had been restored and it is thought that the belligerent couple kissed and made up.

NAVAL STEAMERS SEARCH OUT-GOING STEAMERS FOR ARMS.

Ensign Bisbee of U. S. S. Florida boarding steamer Minnehaha in New York harbor.

New York, August 12.—All steamers leaving this port while the European war is in progress will be thoroughly searched by naval officers to see that no guns and ammunition are smuggled aboard for the use of the combatants. Several steamers have attempted to avoid being searched by running out at night with all lights lowered but thus far all have been halted by the Florida. As yet no attempt to smuggle war munitions has been discovered.

CARBAJAL FLEES TO VERA CRUZ

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Mexico City, Aug. 13.—Accompanied by three members of his cabinet, Provisional President Carbajal, who succeeded General Huerta as executive of the turbulent republic, fled to Vera Cruz today to take protection under the U. S. flag.

President Carbajal was accompanied by Jose Marca Lujan, acting minister of Gobernacion; Eduardo Precial Castillo, acting minister of justice, and Antonio Escandon, acting minister of commerce and labor.

The final action of the cabinet was to adopt a resolution declaring that the provisional government headed by Senor Carbajal was at an end. In the meantime a special train had been ordered and the party of officials left the capital at 2 5 o'clock. The departure of the executive left the central government of the republic without a head.

So hurriedly were the plans of the flight made and executed that members of the families of some of the refugees were left behind. The cabinet was in session considering the report of the Carranza conference, which had been brought here by diplomatic representatives, when word was received that the newspaper correspondents who had gone to report the conference had been arrested by the Constitutionalists. President Carbajal at once ordered a special train and packed up a few personal belongings which he wished to take with him.

Neither the president nor any of his acting ministers took time to write out official resignations.

General Iturbide, military governor of the Federal district, is in constant communication with Carranza and is preparing for the entry of the Constitutionalists.

All the artillery in the city has been sent forward to General Velasco's Federal army, whose intentions are doubtful. They are on the outskirts of the city, only moving at night to mask their operations.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

Raymond, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Thompson, died on Wednesday afternoon at the family residence on West Chestnut street.

The funeral of Patrick Curtin of Ponckhockie was held this morning at his late residence, thence to St. Mary's Church, where mass was celebrated. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Judson Barrett, a well known marine engineer, died this morning at his home, No. 90 Ravine street. He is survived by his wife, four sons, William, Judson, Edward and Arthur, and one daughter, Katherine. One brother, Stephen, also survives. Deceased was for twenty-seven years employed as an engineer by the Cornell Steamboat Company and for the past three years was on the Catskill Evening Line. The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late residence, the services being conducted by the Rev. Dr. A. K. Fuller, pastor of the Wurts Street Baptist Church. Interment in Montrepose Cemetery.

ACCORD.

Accord, Aug. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Gazlay and family spent Sunday with Mrs. Gazlay's parents at Lyonsville.

Benjamin Schoonmaker's crop of wheat was so heavy that the mow timbers of his barn were unable to sustain the weight and broke, letting the wheat drop to the floor below. W. H. Rose's threshing outfit was secured and is clearing up the confusion.

Rev. W. W. Voight and several others expect to attend the Sunday school rally at Whitfield on Friday evening.

The Jewish boarding season is now at its height.

Most of the furniture having been disposed of, the house of the late Dr. Keator will shortly be closed.

Edgar Wilklow and son, Roy, were in town Wednesday en route for Kingston, where the latter's eye, which was severely injured, was treated.

Accord's delegation to the Ellenville fair on Wednesday was very light.

Daniel Christiana of Cottekill is visiting at Oscar Coddington's.

Pistol Shots in South Rondout.

South Rondout was disturbed on Wednesday evening when a man and wife got into an altereation because the woman believed her husband was too attentive to another woman. The affray ended by the woman drawing a revolver from the folds of her skirt and firing four shots point blank at him. Not one took effect but the reports were sufficient to alarm the entire neighborhood. By the time the neighbors reached the scene peace had been restored and it is thought that the belligerent couple kissed and made up.

NAVAL STEAMERS SEARCH OUT-GOING STEAMERS FOR ARMS.

Ensign Bisbee of U. S. S. Florida boarding steamer Minnehaha in New York harbor.

New York, August 12.—All steamers leaving this port while the European war is in progress will be thoroughly searched by naval officers to see that no guns and ammunition are smuggled aboard for the use of the combatants. Several steamers have attempted to avoid being searched by running out at night with all lights lowered but thus far all have been halted by the Florida. As yet no attempt to smuggle war munitions has been discovered.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 13.

Sun rises, 5:03; sets, 7:07.
Weather, clear. Humidity 45 to 63.

The Temperature.

The lowest point registered by The Freeman's thermometer last night was 64 degrees. The highest point reached up until noon today was 76 degrees.

Weather Forecast.

Washington, August 13.—Eastern New York: Partly cloudy tonight and Friday, probably showers in west and north portions; warmer tonight in west portion; gentle to moderate shifting winds.

KINGSTON FOLKS AT THE SEASHORE

Asbury Park, Aug. 13.—Kingston and Ulster county are well represented at this popular resort at this time. The weather is very warm at present but everybody seems to be enjoying the stay. Occasional showers cool the air and fail to mar the pleasure of the visitors. This week is a busy one, being Chautauqua week, Pure Food show, Sousa and his band and fireworks at the pier Friday night. In addition the bathing and other amusements furnish much enjoyment.

Among those noticed on the board walk at Deal were Mr. and Mrs. Myron Teller, Mrs. Charles Bruyn, Mrs. Samuel G. Dimmick, Judge and Mrs. Betts and son, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Turck and Miss Turck and Miss Emma Freer.. Among those at the Warrington are Mr. and Mrs. George Freer, Mrs. John DuBois, Watson M. Freer, Mrs. Albert Carr and grand-daughter, Dorothy Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Blanshan and son, Harold. Lake Katrine is represented by Mr. and Mrs. David Kieffer, Mrs. F. N. Brink and A. M. Freer. Mrs. L. Schoonmaker and Marion Schoonmaker of Accord are also at the Warrington.

Prayers for Peace.

The churches of the city will hold a union prayer meeting service in the First Reformed Church this evening at 7:30 for the offering of united prayers for the return of peace in the nations that are now at war. Practically all of the churches have accepted the invitation to be present, and will attend in large numbers.

Mole Trap the Best.

The best way to exterminate the ground mole is to use a mole trap. A good trap will probably be successful eventually.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Aug. 13.—If it is true that figures never lie, then the averages up to July 15th—the half way mark of the 1914 season—show that the Federal League has been putting up better all-around baseball, in the main, than have either the American or the National Leagues.

Take a squint at the figures that show the happenings in the three leagues up to July 15th:

Elapsed average time per inning for all games: Federal 12.83 minutes; American, 13.42; National 13.48.

Errors—Federal, 1058; American, 1094; National, 1083.

Double plays—Federals, 486; American, 440; National, 475.

Triple plays—Federals, 1; American, 4; National, 2.

Stolen bases—Federal, 800; American; 836; National, 763.

Passed balls by catchers—Federal, 60; American, 96; National, 78.

Bases on balls—Federal, 1834; American, 2026; National, 1953.

Strike outs—Federal, 2498; American, 2600; National, 2213.

Wild pitches—Federal, 106; American, 141; National, 125.

No-hit games—Federal, 0; American 1; National, 0.

One-hit games—Federal, 1; American, 8; National, 3.

Two-hit games—Federal, six; American, ten; National, five.

Three hits games—Federal, six; American, 24; National, fourteen.

The pitchers' records include the names of seventy-five Federal League pitchers, eighty-one American Leaguers and ninety-one National Leaguers—the total number that worked in each league up to the time the figures were compiled.

* * * *

The Feds, from all that we can learn, are now proceeding about the business of grabbing off the star players of the minors. They snared LaRue Kirby, one of the best clubbers in the Southern League, a few days ago, and are said to have their lines laid for the capture of at least a dozen more of the best looking minor leaguers.

It is a comparatively easy matter for the Feds to get the star minor leaguers, because they deal directly with the player and give him the purchase price, instead of going to the minor league club that owns him.

Kirby's case is an illustration. Because of his batting and fielding skill Kirby surely would have brought at least $6,000 from one of the clubs in the American or National Leagues. The minor league club magnate would have received that money and Kirby would have received nothing. But the Feds dealt with Kirby. They didn't have to "cough up" the $6,000 to the minor league owner. They offered Kirby a contract equivalent, at least, to what would have been paid to him by a club in the American or National League. Then they gave him a bonus of about $3,000 for signing. In other words, they bought Kirby from himself.

Wednesday Fair Visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ruge and Mrs. Minard were among the Kingston visitors at the Ellenville fair on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robin Stelle of Clinton avenue visited the Ellenville fair on Floral Parade Day.

David Burgevin and Charles Hungerford with a party of friends motored to Ellenville to attend the fair on Wednesday, Mr. Burgevin being one of the judges of the floral parade.

Dr. Mary Gage-Day, Mrs. T. R. Richards and little daughter, Marjorie, attended the Ellenville fair yesterday.

E. E. Becker of the G. A. Hart store, who is having his vacation this week, was a visitor at the Ellenville fair on Wednesday.

Mrs. Levan Winne, Mrs. Ella Freer, Mrs. Hyman Roosa, and Mrs. Scott Gillespie made up a motor party attending the county fair on Wednesday.

Forty Hours Devotion.

The forty hours devotion opened at St. Colman's Church, East Kingston, Sunday at 10 o'clock when high mass was sung by the rector. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion by Burgevin Brothers of Kingston. A large number of the parishioners attended the services. Special music was rendered by Miss Mooney, the organist of the church.

To Mend Furniture.

Cracks in furniture should be filled with beeswax. Soften the beeswax until it becomes like putty, then press it firmly into the cracks, and smooth the surface over with a thin knife. Sandpaper the surrounding wood, and work some of the dust into the beeswax. This gives a finish to the wood, and when it is varnished the cracks will have disappeared. Putty used in the same way soon dries and falls out.

Mr. said, Anawana Echo is Out.

The "Camp Anawana Echo," edited by the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., is just off the press, and every one interested in boys and boys' work would do well to procure a copy. It contains the experiences and impressions upon the campers written by the boys themselves besides much other interesting and valuable material. The "Echo" serves as a record of this most successful camp, and none who read it can fail to be impressed with the good fellowship and high ideals which were prominent features of Camp Anawana. The Y. M. C. A. boys' camp, which is conducted every year, solves the annual problem of what to do with the boys when school is out, and this paper should dispel any doubts upon the part of the parents and those interested in the association as to the advisability of providing for an even better camp next year.

OLIVEREA.

Oliverea, Aug. 13.—Edwin C. Chase was in Kingston Tuesday as a delegate from the Second election district of the town to the Republican county convention.

Evert Decker of Sullivan county is spending a few days with his daughter, Mrs. H. E. Dutcher, in this village.

George Bush of Scranton came to spend his vacation with his parents in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krom of Rifton visited this place on business on Tuesday.

The much needed rain has come at last. It was certainly welcome as all the gardens were drying up.

The summer boarders of Mrs. Niebergall's have all returned to their homes in the city.

Means of Offense and Defense.

Many reptiles use their tails to strike down their game, while a large number of animals are supplied with pungent odors or secretions that are equally potent as a defense. In certain groups we find enormous horns and tusks that are intended entirely for purposes of protection. In some cases they are upon the top of the head, as in our cows or oxen. Again, as in the elephant or some cetaceans, they are highly developed teeth.

Our Eyes Tint the World.

We view the world with our own eyes, each of us, and we make from within us the world we see. A weary heart gets no gladness out of sunshine; a selfish man is skeptical about friendship, as a man with no ears doesn't care for music.—William Makepeace Thackeray.

Play P. A. right across the boards!

You lay an odds-on bet that Prince Albert is the best pipe and cigarette smoke any man ever put a match to. You'll cash in before you clean out your first tidy red tin.

Here's tobacco that's got real red-blooded man punch, but it can't bite your tongue and it can't parch your throat. That's thrown into the discard by a patented process owned exclusively by the manufacturers. You stick a pin here—no other tobacco can be like Prince Albert; nor has P. A. any "near" relatives! Follow the thought?

Just put it right up to yourself for a test-out. Lay a dime against a tin of Prince Albert and get tipped off from the home plate as to how close to case cards this talk is.

You get wise to that P. A. flavor and fragrance. Because it's just one of those little things in life that smooths out ruffles and wrinkles in the day's work and sends you along right cheerful like.

Prince Albert is sold everywhere. In toppy red bags, 5c (handy for rolling 'em); in tidy red tins, 10c; also in handsome pound and half-pound humidors that make a hit around home or the office.

Prayers for Peace.

The churches of the city will hold a union prayer meeting service in the First Reformed Church this evening at 7:30 for the offering of united prayers for the return of peace in the nations that are now at war. Practically all of the churches have accepted the invitation to be present, and will attend in large numbers.

Mole Trap the Best.

The best way to exterminate the ground mole is to use a mole trap. A good trap will probably be successful eventually.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

New York, Aug. 13.—If it is true that figures never lie, then the averages up to July 15th—the half way mark of the 1914 season—show that the Federal League has been putting up better all-around baseball, in the main, than have either the American or the National Leagues.

Take a squint at the figures that show the happenings in the three leagues up to July 15th:

Elapsed average time per inning for all games: Federal 12.83 minutes; American, 13.42; National 13.48.

Errors—Federal, 1058; American, 1094; National, 1083.

Double plays—Federals, 486; American, 440; National, 475.

Triple plays—Federals, 1; American, 4; National, 2.

Stolen bases—Federal, 800; American; 826; National, 763.

Passed balls by catchers—Federal, 60; American, 96; National, 78.

Bases on balls—Federal, 1834; American, 2026; National, 1953.

Strike outs—Federal, 2498; American, 2600; National, 2213.

Wild pitches—Federal, 106; American, 141; National, 125.

No-hit games—Federal, 0; American 1; National, 0.

One-hit games—Federal, 1; American, 8; National, 3.

Two-hit games—Federal, six; American, ten; National, five.

Three hits games—Federal, six; American, 24; National, fourteen.

The pitchers' records include the names of seventy-five Federal League pitchers, eighty-one American Leaguers and ninety-one National Leaguers—the total number that worked in each league up to the time the figures were compiled.

* * * *

The Feds, from all that we can learn, are now proceeding about the business of grabbing off the star players of the minors. They snared LaRue Kirby, one of the best clubbers in the Southern League, a few days ago, and are said to have their lines laid for the capture of at least a dozen more of the best looking minor leaguers.

It is a comparatively easy matter for the Feds to get the star minor leaguers, because they deal directly with the player and give him the purchase price, instead of going to the minor league club that owns him.

Kirby's case is an illustration. Because of his batting and fielding skill Kirby surely would have brought at least $6,000 from one of the clubs in the American or National Leagues. The minor league club magnate would have received that money and Kirby would have received nothing. But the Feds dealt with Kirby. They didn't have to "touch up" the $6,000 to the minor league owner. They offered Kirby a contract equivalent, at least, to what would have been paid to him by a club in the American or National League. Then they gave him a bonus of about $3,000 for signing. In other words, they bought Kirby from himself.

Wednesday Fair Visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ruge and Mrs. Minard were among the Kingston visitors at the Ellenville fair on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robin Stelle of Clinton avenue visited the Ellenville fair on Floral Parade Day.

David Burgevin and Charles Hungerford with a party of friends motored to Ellenville to attend the fair on Wednesday, Mr. Burgevin being one of the judges of the floral parade.

Dr. Mary Gage-Day, Mrs. T. R. Richards and little daughter, Marjorie, attended the Ellenville fair yesterday.

E. E. Becker of the G. A. Hart store, who is having his vacation this week, was a visitor at the Ellenville fair on Wednesday.

Mrs. Levan Winne, Mrs. Ella Freer, Mrs. Hyman Roosa, and Mrs. Scott Gillespie made up a motor party attending the county fair on Wednesday.

Forty Hours Devotion.

The forty hours devotion opened at St. Colman's Church, East Kingston, Sunday at 10 o'clock when high mass was sung by the rector. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion by Burgevin Brothers of Kingston. A large number of the parishioners attended the services. Special music was rendered by Miss Mooney, the organist of the church.

To Mend Furniture.

Cracks in furniture should be filled with beeswax. Soften the beeswax until it becomes like putty, then press it firmly into the cracks, and smooth the surface over with a thin knife. Sandpaper the surrounding wood, and work some of the dust into the beeswax. This gives a finish to the wood, and when it is varnished the cracks will have disappeared. Putty used in the same way soon dries and falls out.

Mr. and Mrs. Anawana Echo Is Out.

The "Camp Anawana Echo," edited by the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., is just off the press, and every one interested in boys and boys' work would do well to procure a copy. It contains the experiences and impressions upon the campers written by the boys themselves besides much other interesting and valuable material. The "Echo" serves as a record of this most successful camp, and none who read it can fail to be impressed with the good fellowship and high ideals which were prominent features of Camp Anawana. The Y. M. C. A. boys' camp, which is conducted every year, solves the annual problem of what to do with the boys when school is out, and this paper should dispel any doubts upon the part of the parents and those interested in the association as to the advisability of providing for an even better camp next year.

OLIVEREA.

Oliverea, Aug. 13.—Edwin C. Chase was in Kingston Tuesday as a delegate from the Second election district of the town to the Republican county convention.

Evert Decker of Sullivan county is spending a few days with his daughter, Mrs. H. E. Dutcher, in this village.

Miss Isabel Brown of Kingston is a guest of Miss Ethel Rikert..

James H. Parker of New York, who is employed on the police force in that city, is spending a vacation of two weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Miles Parker.

The Rev. D. N. F. Blakeney will conduct services in the Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

A show was given at the Mountain House Tuesday night and drew quite an audience.

BLOOMINGTON.

Bloomington, August 13.—The Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed Church will hold an entertainment in the Bloomington Hall. Look for the date later.

Miss Christina Hess of Kingston spent Sunday with her parents, Felix Hess and family.

Bert Schoonmaker of Georgia is spending a few days with his sister and brother, Mr. and Mrs. George Le Fever.

William O'Grady and family have rented the house of Mrs. Niebergall for the month of August.

A number of out of town people attended the Sunday school picnic on Wednesday last.

A number of our young people spend their afternoons bathing in the Rondout creek.

Mrs. Mary Smith and daughter, Deanie Smith, are spending a few days with her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Smith of Kingston.

Mrs. Mary Howe is spending a couple of weeks with her niece, Mrs David Hasbrouck.

Mrs. Stanley Palmer and children have returned home after visiting relatives out of town.

Miss Josephine Banks, who has been working for Dr. Rymph, has returned to her home in Eddyville.

Henry Biesner, who has been quite ill, is improving under the care of Dr. Rymph.

Mr. and Mrs. Ary Bush and Mr. and Mrs. William Riel spent Wednesday evening with relatives in this place.

Dulus Smith went as a delegate to the state council from this council, No. 93.

George Bush of Scranton came to spend his vacation with his parents in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krom of Rifton visited this place on business on Tuesday.

The much needed rain has come at last. It was certainly welcome as all the gardens were drying up.

The summer boarders of Mrs. Niebergall's have all returned to their homes in the city.

Means of Offense and Defense.

Many reptiles use their tails to strike down their game, while a large number of animals are supplied with pungent odors or secretions that are equally potent as a defense. In certain groups we find enormous horns and tusks that are intended entirely for purposes of protection. In some cases they are upon the top of the head, as in our cows or oxen. Again, as in the elephant or some cetaceans, they are highly developed teeth.

Play P. A. right across the boards!

You lay an odds-on bet that Prince Albert is the best pipe and cigarette smoke any man ever put a match to. You'll cash in before you clean out your first tidy red tin.

Here's tobacco that's got real red-blooded man punch, but it can't bite your tongue and it can't parch your throat. That's thrown into the discard by a patented process owned exclusively by the manufacturers. You stick a pin here—no other tobacco can be like Prince Albert; nor has P. A. any "near" relatives! Follow the thought?

Just put it right up to yourself for a test-out. Lay a dime against a tin of Prince Albert and get tipped off from the home plate as to how close to case cards this talk is.

You get wise to that P. A. flavor and fragrance. Because it's just one of those little things in life that smooths out ruffles and wrinkles in the day's work and sends you along right cheerful like.

Our Eyes Tint the World.

We view the world with our own eyes, each of us, and we make from within us the world we see. A weary heart gets no gladness out of sunshine; a selfish man is skeptical about friendship, as a man with no ears doesn't care for music.—William Makepeace Thackeray.
